1½ Million Employes Of U. S. Get Pay Raise

White House Sent Measure Covering Federal Increases Of $300 to $628

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Staff Writer

A million and a half white-collar Federal employes will get pay increases from a minimum of $300 to a maximum of $628 annually under the pay bill which was approved yesterday by the House and sent to the White House, where the President is certain to sign it.

The vote on the conference report was 272 to 119. Earlier the House rejected by a closer vote a motion by Representative Rankin of Mississippi to table the report That move disposed of, Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee quickly got the House to reconsider its action of two weeks ago in sidetracking the conference report and the roll call saw twoscore members who voted against it 10 days ago change their stands. Among them were Representative Joe Martin, the Republican leader.

The conference report, which was the same report voted down by the House before it took a holiday, provides:

1. For a minumum $300 bonus to low-paid, full-time Federal employes. This provision will have the effect of fixing $1500 as the minimum starting salary for full-time employes and it'll benefit employes whose base pay is less than $2000.

2. The $5000 overtime ceiling which was carried in the bill that was in effect from December 1 to May 1 was kicked out and the new bill permits high-paid employes to draw overtime on the first $2900 of their salaries which is $628 for a 48-hour work week. Department heads, members of commissions, and members of Congress can't be paid overtime, however. The bill will have the effect of giving a handful of 316,000 employes more money through overtime pay than members of Congress get.

3. Overtime was continued at the old rate, which is 1-360th of the annual rate in figuring a day's pay. This is barely over straight time Congress rejected a recommendation by the President that Federal employes be paid full time and a half, as the Government requires to be paid in private industry.

4. Congressional secretaries, judicial employes and employes whose hours of work are irregular and intermittent are given a flat 15 per cent increase. These employes got 10 per cent under the act that expired on May 1. However, Library of Congress, Botanic Gardens and per annum employes in the office of the Architect of the Capitol now will be paid overtime.

5. The bill was made retroactive to May 1, which means that the employes won't lose anything through the failure of the House to approve the report before the old act died. Payday for a score of agencies is Saturday and payrolls for most of these agencies already have been made up on the basis of straight time from May 1. These agencies already are arranging to give their employes supplemental checks to cover overtime the employes have been compelled to work.

6. The bill outlaws the Saturday half-holiday and in signing the bill the President probably will make it plain that he wishes for Federal employes to continue working a minimum 6-day, 48-hour

Gasoline supplies in Washington are at the lowest level of the war, it war learned yesterday following an OPA announcement of a new Nation-wide campaign to stamp out unessential driving by B and C gasoline book holders.

A spokesman for local retail stations summed up the situation here in the words: "We're in the sweat now for a while."

The shortage, which became acute in the past 10 days, was attributed by Petroleum Administration for War and OPA officials to seasonal temptation for extra driving and increased military demands.

OPA officials made no secret of the fact that only the most frugal use of gasoline will obviate "drastic measures" such as temporary elimination of A books or a cut in gasoline allotments under A, B, and C books.

Samuel J. Haber, operator of eight gasoline filling stations, told a Post reporter that he has about a day and a half supply of gasoline

The Senate yesterday passed the Connally antistrike and plant-seizure bill after voting a strengthened War Labor Board subpena powers and firm legislative authority to deal with strikes.

Amended to remove drastic injunction features, but retaining criminal penalties against leaders of strikes, lockouts or slow-downs in Government-owned plants, the rewritten bill was approved 63 to 16.

Passage came after Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana, supported by C. I. O. letters to Senators, led an unsuccessful effort to send the bill back to committee. Wheeler's recommittal motion was defeated, 52 to 37.

Bill in New Dress

Designed originally merely to confirm the President's authority to take over plants or mines threatened with work stoppage during the war, the bill gathered impetus during the mine strike and passed the Senate in new clothes.

Republican support swung to the measure after Senator John A. Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut picked up part of a defeated amendment previously sponsored by Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio and pushed it to Senate approval.

This Danaher rider on the Connally bill would give the War Labor Board legislative recognition for the first time, broaden its powers, and permit it to enter and settle disputes independent of its present reliance on executive orders.

Senator Taft insisted the board, under this authority would be free to formulate its own policies, independent of the Little Steel formula if it chose, and unbound by the "hold the line" stabilization orders. WLB decisions would be

In four loquacious hours, John P. Monroe, Washington manufacturers' representative for many firms and dinner host at the big Red House on R Street, gave Congress abundant information about his work but stoutly refused to answer one question:

What high New Deal official told him he was going to be "smeared."

For that refusal, the House Military Affairs Committee will study the record of his testimony to decide whether he should be cited to the Justice Department for contempt proceedings, Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky announced.

Brewster Denies Assertion

Monroe said that Senator Brewster (Republican) of Maine had told him "a job was going to be done on me." Senator Brewster denied it.

He named Senator Bridges (Republican) of Maine and said that the latter had told him of three or five anonymous phone calls trying to "blacken me."

Senator Bridges was not reached for comment.

Green, McGrath Mentioned

The names of Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, and Gov. J. Howard McGrath, also popped into the hearing as the firm of "McGrath and Green," which Monroe said had been hired as counsel for the Narragansett Machine Co., of Pawtucket, R. I. Monroe also referred to former Gov. Robert Hurley, of Connecticut, now vice president of the firm. Green and McGrath denied any connection with the firm, or with Hurley's employment there. Senator Green's office said that while McGrath and Green law offices in the same suite, they are not a law firm.

Monroe, in public, and in a closed session with the full committee, insisted, variously, that he could not answer, and that he did not remember what "high New Deal officials" warned him that he was to be "smeared."

Paid $900 Monthly

A motion that he be held in contempt on the spot was left hanging, and Chairman May said that the legislative counsel and the committee counsel would have to examine the record before deciding the next step.

Mrs. Eula Smith, who leased the R Street mansion for $500 a month, and who, like Monroe, refused to answer questions of a Military Subcommittee last week, did not testify. She waited through part of the session in a nearby office. At the end, May told her she would con-

Adverse Weather Makes Dent In Food Production Program

With promises of labor and machinery aid in their pockets, America's embattled farmers yesterday found themselves faced by a foe nobody in Washington could help them fight.

Bad crop weather heckled them from Oregon to Maine and all the way down to Texas.

Crops were unusually retarded throughout the East by "persistent coolness." Severe drought conditions continued over a considerable part of the Southwest. "Greenbug conditions" made it tough for wheat in Oklahoma and Texas. April freezes had reduced the stands of oats, barley, and rye in Iowa, while late reports from Oregon indicated frosts had materially injured fruit and truck crops.

In addition, according to the United States Weather Bureau's weekly weather and crop bulletin, frost had badly damaged the early apple crop in Virginia and apprehension was felt for the New England peach crop.

All this at a time when food production is one of the most important tasks facing the Nation and all farmers have been asked to increase their plantings as a direct contribution to the war effort.

Meantime, the Republican Food Study Committee, composed of 42 members of Congress, took in-

Toll in Iceland Accident Now 14; Storm Warning Went Unheeded

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Fourteen persons were killed in the Iceland plane crash Monday which took the lives of Lieut. Gen. Frank M. Andrews and Bishop Adna W. Leonard, the War Department announced last night. There was one survivor.

Among those killed were Brig. Gen. Charles H. Barth, General Andrews' 39-year-old chief of staff, and Chaplain (Colonel) Frank L. Miller of 1920 Thirty-fifth Street Northwest, chief of the plans and training division of the Office of Chief of Chaplains here.

Barth, said to be the youngest Army ground soldier of his rank, was considered one of the most brilliant of America's newer generals. He was a major in the Corps of Engineers before Pearl Harbor.

Lone Survivor Injured

Lone survivor of the crash of the big Army plane in a remote section of bleak Iceland was Staff Sergt. George A. Eisel, of Columbus, Ohio, who was not seriously injured.

No further details of the fatal accident were available here, but news dispatches from London said that it had been reported that the plane had been warned by radio of bad weather closing down over Iceland. A message came back that they were continuing, instead of turning back, the International News Service stated.

The plane was reported to be a B-24 Liberator, a type General Andrews usually used when traveling.

Other Victims Listed

The others listed by the War Department as dead were:

Col. Morrow Krum, public relations officer for the American forces in the European Theater of Operations. Krum, whose home was in Lake Forest, Ill., was a former top-flight newspaperman with Chicago and New York papers.

Chaplain (Maj.) Robert H. Humphrey, of Lynchburg, Va., who was stationed in England and was serving as aide to Bishop Leonard on his inspection tour of troops.

Reds Reported Spurning Nazi Offer of Peace

Proposal Rebuffed With 'Disgust and Ridicule,' Says Radio

By International News Service

London, May 6 (Thursday).—The Moscow radio was quoted by the Daily Mail today as announcing that Germany and her vassal states had "approached" Russia with "peace suggestions" that were promptly rebuffed.

The Soviet broadcast, as quoted by the Daily Mail, also said similar unsuccessful Nazi peace overtures had been put out in the direction of the United States and Britain in a German effort to separate the western democracies from the U. S. S. R.

The Mail said the Moscow radio had quoted a Soviet spokesman as stating:

"Hitler has offered peace to the western democracies if they abandon Russia and peace to Russia if it gives Germany a free hand in the west.

"Russia has received the proposals with disgust and ridicule and has replied: 'unconditional surrender and the destruction of the German armies.'"

Sweden Locates Sunken Submarine

London, May 5 (AP).—The Swedish submarine Ulven, which had been reported missing, has been found, Reuters reported tonight from Stockholm. There were no details immediately.

A German broadcast said the submarine, which went down April 16 with 33 men aboard, had been found near an island off the west coast of Sweden. It was lost while on maneuvers, although Sweden announced that a German ship had fired on the Swedish submarine Draken inside Sweden's territorial waters on the same day the Ulven was lost.

Russia Wants Strong Poland, Stalin Says

States Willingness To Enter Assistance Pact, If Desired

By the Associated Press

New York, May 5 (AP).—Premier Stalin of Russia, in a letter to the New York Times correspondent in Moscow, stated today that Russia wishes to see a strong and independent Poland established after Hitler's defeat, and said that if Poland desires, the Soviet Union would enter a postwar alliance of mutual assistance against Germany.

Written a little more than a week after Russia broke off relations with Poland, Stalin's letter was in reply to questions submitted by the Times correspondent, Ralph Parker.

The text, as carried in a copyrighted story in tomorrow's Times:

"Dear Mr. Parker:

"On May 3 I received your two questions concerning Polish-Soviet relations.

"Here are my answers:

"1. Question: 'Does the government of the U. S. S. R. desire to see a strong and independent Poland after the defeat of Hitler's Germany?'

"Answer: Unquestionably it does.

"2. Question: 'On what fundaments is it your opinion that the relations between Poland and the U. S. S. R. should be based after the war?'

"Answer: Upon the fundament of solid good neighborly relations and mutual respect, or should the Polish people so desire, upon the fundament of an alliance providing for mutual assistance against the Germans as the chief enemies of the Soviet Union and Poland.

"With respect. J. Stalin. May 4, 1943."

Russia broke relations April 26 with the Polish government-in-exile, charging it with acting in league with the Germans in a hostile campaign against Russia in connection with German allegations that the Soviets had slaughtered 10,000 Polish officers near Smolensk.

Tension Unmistakable

Sweden Holds to Neutrality, Sustaining Precarious Role

By Marquis Childs
Copyright, 1943, The Register and Tribune Syndicate

(First of a Series)

Stockholm, May 5.—All but cut off from the outside world, Sweden still clings to a precarious neutrality, confident that the latest crisis over the sinking of the submarine Ulven will end, as in the past, with the familiar war of nerves, and return to what, during the past three years, has become the "normal tension" of uncertainty.

The surface of life is so peaceful it is difficult to realize how grave is Sweden's plight. Over May Day weekend thousands took to the country and to island retreats. Others, particularly students in new white caps denoting senior status, filled restaurants to overflowing. Stockholm, with the possible exception of Madrid, is the last capital in Europe where men and women in evening clothes throng the clubs and cafes.

Yet beneath all this the tension is unmistakable. For three years the Swedes have played Daniel in the lions' den, and it is not a comfortable role to sustain.

They have continued the democratic way of life. Their press has, in the past, been characterized by veteran American observers as the freest in the world. More and more the press reflects the pro-Allied sentiment of the majority of the people. In the beginning active Allied sentiment was led by ardent champions of England, who constantly worked on the mass of people desiring the favor of neither side.

They have long since, however, passed that stage. Now even the hard-headed "realists" who believed it might be necessary to deal with Germany foresee Allied victory. This is the prevailing view of what is left of neutral Europe. It explains why the Swedes are especially anxious to have their position reported to the world at this time.

They are acutely sensitive to the mistaken assumption in America that because of their geographical position they furnish to the Germans munitions and everything else the Germans ask of them. Allied observers report strict compliance with the Swedish regulation forbidding the export of munitions. Shipments of iron ore to the Nazis are reported to be under the 1938 levels and with some exceptions, conspicuously chemical woodpulp, this is true of other products.

The Swedes have welcomed every manifestation in the demo-

The Bolivian executive is now making an official visit to the United States. Earlier in the day on being welcomed by the President he declared that he was convinced his visit would "serve to strengthen even more the ties of amity and cooperation between our two countries."

Guests at the state dinner last night included Dr. Tomas Elio, Bolivian Minister of Foreign Affairs; Secretary of State Cordell Hull; General David Toro, former president of Bolivia; Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox.

President Penaranda arrived in the City in the afternoon and was greeted on the south lawn of the White House by President Roosevelt, under the same maple tree which has shaded two kings, a queen and four other chiefs of state in the last year or so.

General Penaranda, spent the night in the mansion. Today he will move to Blair House, which will be his official residence until he sets

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 5.—American and French troops have reached a point only 10 miles from Bizerte while another American column swinging southeast from Mateur was reported tonight to be threatening to turn German positions which have been holding up the British First Army 20 miles west of Tunis.

Three columns, two of them American, were converging on Bizerte. A French column reached Cap Koran, 10 miles west of Bizerte and at the edge of a plain leading to that city, one American column pushing along the northern edge of Lake Achkel below Bizerte repulsed a German counterattack at Djebel Cheniti, and another American column driving northeastward from Mateur was only 5 miles short of Ferryville.

Ferryville, Bizerte in Range

Ferryville is 10 miles above Mateur and only 8 miles across Lake Bizerte from the heavily fortified naval base. As a supply port for the Axis forces Ferryville already has been rendered largely useless by concentrated American air bombing.

Big Allied guns now can shell both Ferryville and Bizerte.

Pushing out of the captured highway hub of Mateur the Americans were reported to have made a 5-mile gain east of that city, and to the southeast repulsed another light enemy counterattack launched from Djebel Makna, a ridge on the east side of the river Tine.

It was this latter American thrust aimed at Tebourba, 18 miles west of Tunis and about the same distance southwest of Mateur, that was threatening to outflank the Germans who have been holding up the British First Army east of Medjez-El-Bab.

Nazi Attack Shattered

Dispatches said that American patrols already had taken Eddekhila, only 6 miles west of Tebourba, and the retarded British First Army is 6 miles southwest of Tebourba. A junction of the two forces would facilitate a direct smash at Tunis.

The stubbornness of the German defenders opposing the British First Army and the Eighth Army in the south suggested the Axis command was bent on keeping the way

African Conquests Season Americans

In North Africa

Nazis Deport French, Halt Aid to Allies

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

Mateur, Tunisia, May 4 (Delayed). The Germans in northern Tunisia took no chances on a backyard rebellion and transported to France all French residents suspected of pro-Allied sympathies.

This was disclosed by a French soldier who was captured in the Pont Du Fahs sector last January and who escaped from the Nazis at Tunis as he was about to be sent to Italy. He made his way to Mateur where relatives hid him for months.

The American occupation of Mateur left him free to rejoin his regiment.

"He told us the Germans systematically weeded out anyone thought to be in favor of the Allies and sent them to France where they could keep an eye on them," an American staff officer said. "Even elderly retired French army officers were forced to leave to insure that the people would be leaderless."

As a result of this policy, the Americans are now finding numbers of residents opposed openly or secretly to the Allied cause. This is particularly true of Italian farmers who infiltrated northern Tunisia in recent years.

Following military custom, the Allies are removing all suspected persons from combat areas to prevent possible sabotage and espionage. They are turned over to French civilian authorities for full investigation. Any penalty or punishment is fixed by the French.

Mateur Shows Effectiveness of Lessons in Attack

By Harold V. Boyle

Mateur, Tunisia, May 4 (Delayed) The new American Army reached maturity at Mateur.

These troops are veterans—men now know how to protect themselves and how to use their weapons in a way to kill the most enemy soldiers.

A half year of battle has made them so, and in the past six weeks they've changed from a defensive to an offensive power which now does the slugging and picks the spot where the punches land.

The capture of Mateur illustrates how the fast-growing American Army in Africa has taught itself to attack properly with utmost coordination of all types of arms.

Cooperating like the fingers of a hand, air, infantry and artillery forces have filched from the Nazis the bright flower of a well planned and well earned victory.

There were five phases to this battle, five problems that had to be solved before vehicles bearing the White Star of America rolled through the streets of Mateur. They were:

Problems Described

1. The problem of air support. 2. The problem of the mousetrap position. 3. The problem of Hill 609—the Djebel Tahent. 4. The problem of the Jefna position. 5. The problem of the "ambush country" along the Mediterranean.

The air support proved the least of the American worries. The Axis air force had been so weakened by an unrelenting two-month Allied air attack that it could not cope with the swarms of fighters and bombers that filled the skies of northern Tunisia.

Taking of the mousetrap position, a horseshoe shaped group of hills northeast of Beja surrounding a valley, was more ticklish. The Germans apparently hoped the American tanks would come charging across the valley floor in the face of antitank guns which could murder them from the hills as at Tebourba, Medjez El Bab and Sidi Bou Zid.

But this time it was different. The Germans were dug in against tank fire and artillery shells. But you can't hide from the bayonet, and doughboys harried the foe from the hills. When the last one was cleared of enemy guns, an armored column rolled northeast through the mousetrap—a trap with its hinges sprung—and sped straight into Mateur on Monday morning, May 3.

Storming of Djebel Tahent, listed on terrain maps as Hill No. 609, on the Friday before unlocked the real key to Mateur because it put in American hands control of a peak so high it dominated all the countryside observation posts and enabled the laying down of an artillery barrage on any point.

The great Djebel was taken in the age-old manner of foot troops indulging in bloody fighting wherein both sides dealt and took heavy punishment.

The Jefna position was in some ways the most interesting of the five problems and the toughest.

It was constructed by German War Academy students, who fortified the area east of Sedjeanane as an all-out and impregnable barrier. Before Mateur its western bulwarks were green and bald hills—Djebel Azzag and Djebel Ajred—astride the Sedjeanane-Mateur road about halfway between the two cities—Green Hill to the north and Bald Hill to the south.

Two Hills Flanked

Convinced that they could make no more headway by frontal assault than the other Allied troops who had butted in vain against these deceptively mild but menacing mountains, American staff officers tried that old fistic formula: "If you can't bust his nose, bite his ear."

In a military version of the end run they flanked Green and Bald Hills by taking the less strongly fortified hills to their side.

When the troops had worked around to positions where they could pour artillery fire behind the Jefna position and blast traffic from the supply road coming from Mateur, Green and Bald Hills became untenable.

The fifth problem, to push back the Germans and Italians in the scrub pine and underbrush along the Mediterranean approaches to Bizerte, was chiefly one of supply.

Care, Structure Making 'Forts' Durable Plane

By the Associated Press

An Advanced Field in North Africa, May 4, (Delayed),—Of a group of 70 Flying Fortresses which left the United States almost a year ago, 44 still are operating today over Tunisia.

Every plane has had more than 340 operational hours, most have more than 300 and one has 399. Some are patched like crazy quilts from bullet holes, but they still carry out their missions.

They have struck against Hitler in Europe, and are now devoting their primary attention to Mussolini. Some of the planes have made 50 or 60 bombing flights.

While a large part of the credit for their long lives must go to the skilled crews for bringing them back so often that losses in combat average less than 1 per cent, a large share of the credit for keeping the Forts flying is given by these crews to the careful American workmanship in their creation and the eager and painstaking care from their unsung ground crews.

"If those darn pilots would quit trying to fly them through walls of flak we would keep these big boys flying from now until the war ends," one ground crew chief said. "You can't wear 'em out."

open into the northwestern tip of Tunisia, the Cape Bon area, for a final stand. All along the western and southern rim of the Axis defense arc the Germans were offering violent resistance.

The Germans hurled 30 tanks against the British First Army in a counterattack yesterday east of Medjez-El-Rab, but today's communique said 12 of them were destroyed, including two 60-ton Tigers. The enemy's infantry waves also were broken and thrown back.

Tommies then were said to have gained ground in their effort to take the last hill barring them from swarming onto the plain leading to Tunis.

Although both sides have suffered heavily in this area between Medjez-El-Bab and Pont Du Fahs, the British First Army steadily has been sapping Nazi strength. An example of this was the announcement today that the British had taken 5000 prisoners, 4000 of them Germans, since April 21, the eve of the current allied offensive.

Farther south the Nineteenth French Corps, commanded by Gen. Louis Marie Koeltz, was making headway in its effort to crack open the southern approaches to Tunis. These troops by nightfall yesterday had reached a point only 8 miles from Zaghouan and a communique tonight said they had gained "many miles" since then in the attempt to outflank Axis positions in the Pont Du Fahs sector, 14 miles to the west.

Pont Du Fahs Bypassed

The French bypassed Pont Du Fahs in their eastward sweep toward Zaghouan, whose capture would threaten the encirclement of the Germans who are holding up Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's British Eighth Army in the Enfidaville sector, 3 miles to the southeast.

From Zaghouan a road leads eastward to the coast at Bou Ficha. Tunis is 8 miles north of Zaghouan.

Meanwhile, the Eighth Army's artillery still was pumping shells into the Axis mountain nests and its patrols had several clashes with the enemy north of Enfidaville.

How long the enemy can hold out in Africa was said to be now a question of supplies and reinforcements. Dispatches from captured Mateur said the Germans retreated from that important highway junction so hurriedly that they left military stores and food supplies, including 300 cases of California prunes.

The Germans have suffered heavily in the last two weeks because of steady Allied pressure, but they also have enjoyed the advantage of bad weather which has kept Allied air power from continuing their effective raids on Axis supply ships and planes.

The Allies also have suffered losses, but fresh American troops have been shuttled into the Mateur sector to exploit the capture of that area by fanning out in all directions. More fresh Allied troops also are waiting the call to action.

For the third day clouds limited air operations over the battlefield, but light naval forces blew up a Tunis-bound ship carrying munitions and mechanical transport and sank its 650-ton Italian torpedo boat escort off Cap Bon.

Italian Bases Raided

Long-range American Liberators of the Desert Air Force also got in destructive blows on southern Italy, hitting harbor targets at the Italian naval base of Taranto and at Reggio Calabria.

All the Liberators returned.

Axis fighters were reported showing signs of avoiding battle because of their limited strength. A squadron of R. A. F. Spitfires dived on a formation of 18 Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfs yesterday, but the Germans raced away.

In the late afternoon, however, Airacobras encountered 15 ME-109s and destroyed one of them.

R. A. F. light and medium bombers assisted the French ground forces by attacking Zaghouan, and Hurribombers set a number of trucks afire in cruises over Axis-held roads.

Photographic reconnaissance of the Flying Fortress raid April 26 on Grossetto Airfield, 90 miles northwest of Rome, disclosed that eight barracks buildings were destroyed and 13 others partly destroyed. One large hangar and eight aircraft on the ground also were destroyed.

Aerial photos of Bizerte also showed that Flying Fortresses two days ago scored hits on a seaplane station hangar, a wireless telegraph station and also planted bombs along dockside and harbor roads.

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 5 (INS).—A significant development occurred today when Fighting French Admiral Jean Museller arrived at Allied headquarters to assist in the final push to evict the foe from his last African footholds. Admiral Museller is intimately acquainted with the defenses of Bizerte which he personally organized during his stay there as naval commander a few years ago.

Bad Weather Adds to Farmers' Worries

creased production as its goal and announced it would hold meetings throughout the country in an effort to encourage farmer groups in the thought that there still is time "to do something about the 1943 crops."

Chairman Tom Jenkins of Ohio said a subcommittee would meet in Boston next Monday and in Philadelphia the week following, and that additional meeting places would be selected later.

Contracts for canneries, so farmers will know what to expect for their 1943 crops, meat and poultry production, and the subject of rationing, were termed immediate problems before the committee.

Concerned Over Waste

The members are especially concerned, Jenkins said, over "the waste in black markets and in the system of issuing slaughtering permits to small dealers." He said slaughtering permits for individuals were being withdrawn in Ohio, because so much waste is resulting from the killing of animals under conditions that cause so much waste of by-products.

"The large packing houses are equipped to utilize the blood, the bristles and all parts of animals. These and other vital by-products have been going to waste," he said.

Permits for individual slaughterers have been granted only recently, as part of the effort to stamp out black markets in meat.

Jenkins stressed that his committee is not a "heckling" body but wants to be constructive in a situation of vital importance and in which encouragement from all sources is needed.

As part of its move to establish dollar and cents maximum prices on all foods, the Office of Price Administration yesterday established wholesale ceilings for fresh and smoked sausage, frankfuters, and bologna.

The regulations, to go into effect, May 24, will be followed soon by announcement of retail prices for these products, OPA said.

Price ceilings on fresh fish can be expected soon, according to Coordinator of Fisheries Harold L. Ickes, who said a "fair system of allocating production of fishery products among various elements of the fish trade" will be placed into effect as soon as the maximums are established.

Virtually All Covered

When fish and sausage prices go into effect, ceilings will have been extended to practically all the meats. Pork and poultry ceilings are in effect, and those for beef, mutton, and veal will be in operation May 17.

Three grades for sausage were announced by OPA. For the AA product, under its regulation, only skeletal meat and cheek and head meat and a small amount of "extender" may be used. For the A produce offal, in addition, may be used, and for grade B the producer is permitted to use "large quantities of non-meat products."

The sausage industry, according to OPA, did a total business of $476,124,110 in 1939, the last year for which figures were available. As an illustration of its importance in the American diet, it was shown up as a good food for "snack, a lunch pail staple or a presidential novelty for visiting royalty."

Reds Tear Wide Gap In Nazis' Kuban Line

Overrun Krimskaya, 9 Other Towns, Kill 7000 Germans in 8-Mile Push

By Natalia Rene
International News Service Staff Writer

Moscow (Thursday), May 6.—Soviet troops were disclosed today to have broken through German lines in the Kuban delta of the western Caucasus for an advance of eight miles that overran 10 towns, including the important rail junction of Krimskaya.

More than 7000 Germans were killed and great quantities of material captured or destroyed in the violent Soviet assault, which tore a gap 17 miles wide in the Nazi defense northeast of Novorossisk, according to the Russian midnight communique.

Announcement of the first major victory by the Red army since the close of its winter offensive raised to more than 15,000 the number of Nazis slain in the Kuban Valley in the past week.

Germans Cut Off

Soviet occupation of Krimskaya threatened to cut off from escape large German forces at that Black Sea naval base, where the invaders are already under attack by Soviet units that have smashed into the city's southern outskirts.

(The Associated Press said the advance put the Russians 9 miles from the Black Sea port of Novorossisk. The entire Russian land front appeared to be coming alive, it added, with fighting reported in various sectors between the Black Sea and Leningrad in the north, but the most violent actions were confined to the Caucasus. These Russians were using much American equipment, supplied via Iran.)

Fighting Continues

The midnight bulletin said "fierce fighting continues" in the Kuban, indicating the Red army's determination to push the Germans entirely out of the narrowing strip of west Caucasian coastal land they still hold.

(The German high command Wednesday announced that its troops had evacuated Krimskaya Tuesday morning. The Nazis said they had ranged themselves along a new defense line west of Krimskaya, closer to the Taman Peninsula which forms a land bridge of escape to the narrow Kerch Strait and the Crimea.

(The Nazi command said the Red army had opened a large-scale new drive on the Northwestern Front south of Lake Ilmen, but claimed that several Russian onslaughts, supported with tanks and artillery, had been repulsed.)

Elsewhere on the long Russian front, the midnight communique said, there were no important changes Wednesday.

Bolivian President Welcomed

WARM GREETING—President Roosevelt yesterday extended a warm welcome to President Enrique Penaranda of Bolivia, when he arrived for an official visit. Penaranda, an overnight guest at the White House, was the honored guest at a "stag" state dinner out on a tour Sunday.

In a statement to the press, the soldier-statesman from the Andes said that the people of Bolivia have a "true admiration and friendship" for those of the United States. Now that Bolivia is one of the United Nations, he said, the ties of amity and cooperation will be strengthened.

Bolivia broke off diplomatic relations with Germany, Italy and Japan shortly after the attack on Pearl Harbor, and more recently General Penaranda decreed that a state of war existed between Bolivia and the Axis powers.

General Penaranda started for Washington from Miami by train, but he left the train at Richmond, Va., and traveled the remaining 110 miles by motor car. This unusual procedure was adopted when it was discovered that there was no train to get him here at the hour set for the White House reception. The time-table showed that the available trains would be either too early or too late.

President Roosevelt, attired in a blue suit and seemingly in a jolly mood, was waiting under the maple tree when the limousine bearing General Peneranda and Secretary of State Hull came up the driveway.

The two chiefs of state clasped hands warmly, and then General Peneranda stood between President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt for the customary honors. While a superbly drilled honor guard of soldiers, sailors and marines presented arms, the Army band played first the national anthem of Bolivia and then "The Star-Spangled Banner."

General Penaranda, who led the Bolivian army in the field in the Grand Chaco war with Paraguay, was accompanied here by Dr. Tomas Manuel Elio, Minister of Foreign Affairs; General Toro, the former President of Bolivia; Don Enrique Finot, Bolivian ambassador to Mexico; Dr. Gabriel Gosalvez Ambassador; Gen. Felipe M. Rivera, Minister Plenipotentiary; Don Jorge del Castillo, secretary to the President; Don Jorge de la Barra, director of protocol; Don Luis Fernando Guachalla Bolivain Ambassador to the United States; Pierre de la Boal, U. S. Ambassador to Bolivia, and General Penaranda's two American aides—Brig. Gen. James H. Walker, U. S. Army, and Capt. Albert E. Schrader, U. S. Navy.

'Never Quit' Flier Dies on Routine Flight

By Murlin Spencer
Associated Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in New Guinea, May 1 (Delayed).—Maj. Edward Larner, described by Gen. Henry H. Arnold as a flier who "never heard the word 'quit,' was killed yesterday in the crash of his B-25 Billy Mitchell, a plane he helped convert from a high altitude bomber to a low-level agent of destruction.

The handsome, daring airman from Roswell, N. M., and San Francisco, one of the few squadron commanders to lead his group on every mission, met death with seven others following a short, routine flight.

Other victims were: A captain in the Australian Intelligence Service; Lieut. Frederick Ensminger of Osgood, Ind., Larner's copilot and on his first mission with the squadron; Lieut. John J. Clarke, Chicago, the navigator; Staff Sergeant Columbus G. Pelham, Savannah, Ga., radioman and gunner; Staff Sergt. Vernon Moore, Alapaha, Ga., gunner; Sergts. Robert L. Fecity, Revere, Mass., and Ber J. Manuelian, Boston, both crew chiefs.

For two days the American flag hung at half staff as Allied airmen mourned the loss of their second noted flier in this area in 18 days. Maj. Ken McCullar of Courtland, Miss., one of the top men in the heavy bombardment group, was killed April 12 when his plane crashed after hitting a kangaroo on a predawn takeoff.

Long-Range U. S. Bombers Raid Indo-China

By the Associated Press

Chungking, May 5.—The Fourteenth United States Army Air Force—strengthened by newly-arrived Liberator bombers which can attack Japan itself—struck its heaviest blow of the war yesterday by pounding Japanese military installations on Hainan Island off the southern tip of China, and in the Hanoi-Haiphong area of northern French Indo-China.

"The mission was the heaviest bombing and strafing raid of the war against Japanese installations from China-held bases," said the communique from Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters. "All our planes engaged in this operation are accounted for."

The four-engined long-range Liberators on their first flight in this theater, were reported by their commander to have "pretty nearly wiped out" the airport at Samah on the southern tip of Hainan Island, which the Japanese have converted into a powerful base. The operation was part of the "on-to-Tokyo" plans of Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's American and Chinese airmen.

Continuing Attack Indicated

(The Tokyo radio in a broadcast heard in London reported that American planes had made two raids Wednesday on targets in northern Indo-China, indicating a continuance of the United States attacks.)

Two-engined Mitchell bombers attacked the Japanese bases in northern Indo-China which lie across the Gulf of Tonkin from Hainan Island, and then P-40 fighters strafed the target areas.

The Liberators flew unescorted on the Hainan expedition, 200 miles of their trip being the over-water hop across the Gulf of Tonkin. The Japanese apparently were caught by surprise on both raids because the communique said the American planes reached their targets without interception and against ineffective antiaircraft fire.

30 Tons Dropped

On their first combat mission the Liberators commanded by Col. Eugene Beebe of Moscow, Idaho, a former pilot for Gen. Henry H. Arnold, dropped 30 tons of bombs on the Japanese airport and harbor facilities at Samah.

Ten tons of high explosives were reported dropped on the Hanoi-Haiphong sector west of Hainan, and the communique said "it is estimated that 75 per cent of the bomb tonnage struck the target areas, desroying or heavily damaging fuel and ammunition dumps, warehouses, one refinery, coal yards, and dock installations."

Chinese pilots attached to the Fourteenth Air Force participated in the raids.

Yanks in China Rack Up 10-1 Score

A combat score of 10 to 1 has been racked up against the Japanese by United States Army fliers in China, Lieut. Col. Herbert Morgan said yesterday.

Morgan, whose home is at Freedom, Pa., is assistant chief of staff and operations officer for the Fourteenth Air Force, and has just returned from China to Washington.

"We've destroyed better than 10 to 1 of their planes in the air, and counting aircraft destroyed on the ground, about 12 or 15 to 1, with emphasis on the higher figure," he said.

The main target of American bombardment in China is Japanese shipping, Morgan reported, and so far "all Japanese ships bombed have been sunk." One bomber shot down last October 25 in a raid over Hongkong, he said, was the only American bomber lost in all the Fourteenth Air Forces bombing operations over enemy-occupied China in more than 60 raids.

The raid Morgan remembers with the greatest pleasure is that of last November 27 over the great Pearl River base of the Japanese at Canton.

"There we met the Japanese on something like even terms," he said. "They had 30 to 35 fighter planes and we had 10 bombers and 23 fighter planes. We're still embarrassed because we let 2 or 3 of them get away that day. We also destroyed 2 8000-ton steamers and about 50 barges.

"No one was even hit on our side, except a photographer who caught a spent bullet which burned him slightly. He wears the bullet for a watch charm now."

Mexico's First Lady Upsets Chiselers

Mexico City, May 5 (AP).—Senora Avila Camacho, wife of the president of Mexico, returned to working women last Mothers' Day, all the sewing machines they had pawned in the government pawnshop.

This year, as Mothers' Day approached, the pawnshop reported a great influx of machines—that owners evidently expected would be returned free.

But the government said the first lady is giving 17,000 kerosene stoves to poor mothers this year.

U. S. Plane Lands With 2 of Engines Dead on One Side

Somewhere in New Guinea, April 21 (Delayed) (AP).—Four Americans flying in New Guinea believe they are the only ones in this area to bring a Flying Fortress down with two engines out on one side.

It happened after a skip bombing raid on Bogia, New Guinea, when a ship's ack-ack hit the big bomber and shot away all cables on one side and left the two engines on the right side running away. They couldn't be throttled back.

On reaching home base, the two engines were cut off and on the fifth try the big ship landed safely. Lieuts. Frank Denault, Springfield, Mass.; W. I. Krywitchi, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; C. L. Anderson, Portland, Oreg., and Roger Vargas, Flagstaff, Ariz., stepped out breathing hard.

LaGuardia Opens 'White Market' To Fight Violations

New York, May 5 (AP).—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia said in a press conference today that he was establishing a "white market" in New York City to combat ceiling price violations in the potato market and asked aid from farmers throughout the country.

"I am establishing a white market," LaGuardia said, "and will buy and import any produce from anyone or anywhere which will help get food into my white market."

Pipe Line Work Is Resumed Under Guard

By the Associated Press

Illmo, Mo., May 5.—Employes of two construction companies, under protection of 90 officers and men of the Missouri State Guard, resumed work this afternoon on a southeast Missouri section of a Government-financed pipe line.

H. A. Edmunson of Tulsa, Okla., president of the Oil States Construction Co., said 100 employes resumed operations on the pipe line right of way shortly after the Guard arrived on the scene. The Dunn Trucking & Construction Co., with a force of 25, also went back to work.

Stopped by Violence

Construction of a 63-mile section of the new line, which will transport war-vital gasoline from Texas to the East, was stopped last week after two outbreaks of violence had accompanied efforts of A. F. of L. unions to organize the workmen.

Governor Donnell directed mobilization of the Sixth Infantry of the State Guard when Sheriff John Hobbs reported his inability to enlist residents of the southeastern Missouri county to assist in maintaining peace.

Following the sheriff's report, the Governor received a telegram signed by 24 persons who said they had objected to being deputized on the ground they had no training "to cope with a situation which is beyond our resources and abilities."

Arrests Ordered

The Governor last night ordered the Scott County sheriff to arrest citizens who refused to accept deputy commissions to assist him. Only one had accepted such a commission since the Governor asked the sheriff last Sunday to issue them.

Work on the line in southeast Missouri was being rushed because of the growing Eastern need for oil. It halted last week when three A. F. of L. labor unions began an organization campaign among employes of the Oil States Construction Co. and the Dunn Trucking & Construction Co. Fights between A. F. of L. members and company employes have occurred, the Governor was informed.

A third construction company's work was halted when its A. F. of L. employes laid down their tools to support the organization efforts. It is the Bolz Dredging Co. of St. Louis.

More Equipment Seen Imperative Rail Need

Chicago, May 5 (AP).—America's railroads have reached the point where they must have new rail, more motive power and additional cars if they are to handle increasing war time traffic without serious congestion, Ralph Budd, president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, told stockholders at their annual meeting today.

Contrasting traffic of the Burlington in the first quarter this year with the same period in the pre-war year of 1938, Budd said passenger traffic had increased 218 per cent and freight traffic 143 per cent.

Postal Zone Numbers Ordered To Speed Service in Wartime

Postmaster General Walker yesterday ordered a system of delivery zone numbering for mail addressed to the Nation's 178 largest cities, in a step to simplify handling and expedite delivery.

The plan, to be made effective gradually with local notification by postmasters, requires that a number designating the delivery zone of the addressee be placed after the city of destination.

Thus a letter might be addressed: John C. Smith, 222 Mattapan Ave., Boston 8, Mass., with the numberal designating the carrier delivery zone. Residents of affected cities will be expected to notify correspondents of their zone number.

Under the present system, Walker explained in a statement, it is necessary for postal clerks to learn the delivery area of each city carrier, knowing which parts of every street each carrier covers. This requires years of study, he said, and the Post Office Department is losing many of these experienced clerks to the Army.

The new system will make it possible for inexperienced clerk to distribute the mail by following the zoning numbers. Publishers of magazines and newspapers and business firms with large mailing lists will be asked to package their mailings by zone numbers, and thus eliminate one complete handling at main postoffices, the Postmaster General said.

Postoffice patrons in each city will be notified as preparations to effect the plan locally are completed.

Ickes Set-Up May Seize, Divert Excess Coal

Preparing against any new coal emergency, Fuel Administrator Ickes yesterday set up machinery under which he may seize coal from persons or plants with safe margins of supply and divert it to those caught short.

The action was taken at a time when coal miners of the Nation are at work under a 15-day truce pending attempts to settle wage demands.

Ickes issued regulations setting up procedure under which he could act to protect war plants and essential civilian users from shortages, regardless of whether they arise from a work shortage, faulty distribution or other cause.

He offered reassurance, however, that "the normal distribution of coal will not be disturbed . . . unless such action is absolutely essential."

"However, when it becomes necessary to divert coal in emergencies, I shall not hesitate to do so," he said.

Miners Policy Unit Adjourns

By the Associated Press

New York, May 5.—The United Mine Workers' policy committee adjourned today, possibly for some time, after a 17-minute meeting about which John L. Lewis, U. M. W. president, declined to comment.

"We're just adjourning," Lewis said, as newsmen noted that a number of the 300 members were shaking hands and exchanging good-bys.

The U. M. W. president maintained his silence on whether the miners would be represented when the War Labor Board panel resumes hearings in Washington tomorrow on the bituminous coal contract dispute. His smiling parry was:

Some policy committee members told newsmen they would go home this afternoon or tonight, but Lewis declined to say whether another meeting was scheduled soon, whether any action was taken at today's session, or what the purpose of the session had been.

Some 450,000 soft coal miners are back at work under the 18-day truce which ended a work stoppage that started last Saturday morning, as the United States Government seized struck mines. The truce was announced by Lewis Sunday night, 22 minutes before President Roosevelt took the air to make a direct appeal to the miners to keep soft coal, vital to war industry, flowing to factories.

Meanwhile, in Washington, President Roosevelt has insisted that settlement of the contract dispute, in which the miners asked principally a $2 basic increase, portal-to-portal pay and unionization of minor bosses, be subject to approval of the War Labor Board, target of Lewis' attacks.

Anthracite operators, making what they termed their final effort to negotiate a contract with the United Mine Workers, today expressed a willingness to concede "in substance" four of the miners' 21 proposals, but ruled out as "impossible of fulfillment" the $2-a-day increase, portal-to-portal demand and all others involving large wage increases.

Barth Killed In Air Crash; Toll Now 14

ton and president of the board of trustees of American University here, was making a tour, visiting Protestant chaplains and members of the armed services in Europe, Africa and Asia.

He was making the tour, the General Commision on Army and Navy Chaplains said yesterday, as a representative of that body of which he was chairman. Chaplains Miller and Humphrey accompanied him on the trip through the active combat zones overseas.

"These men," said the commission in a formal statement, "were serving their God and their country. While we are deeply distressed at the news, we know that they were facing the dangers as all true soldiers of the Cross and of the Nation would do at this critical time.

"We realize that this news should lead us all to a clearer realization of the grim struggle in which both the Cross and the Flag are now engaged."

The crash brought the total number of American generals to be killed in the war to date to nine. General Andrews was the highest ranking American officer to be killed.

Gen. Barth has seved as aide of Andrews in several posts since the latter was commander of the Caribbean Area, officers here said. He was assistant chief of staff to General Andrews when the latter was commander of American forces in the Middle East.

Barth was born at Leavenworth, Kans., and was graduated from West Point in 1925. He was the son of the late Brig. Gen. Charles H. Barth and listed Walter, Minn., as his home address.

Dortmund Saturated With Bombs

By Lewis Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 5.—The largest concentration of four-engine bombers ever sent out on a war mission bashed Dortmund, Germany, last night with a 1500-ton blockbuster saturation raid approximating the weight of destruction heaped on Cologne by approximately 300 planes nearly a year ago.

The size of the R. A. F. attacking force over Dortmund could only be gauged by the fact that the loss of 30 planes was not considered excessive. In the official language of the Air Ministry the raid was described as "very heavy."

Canadian participants in the Dortmund raid told of "terrific" explosions and fires caused by the cascade of 4-and-2-ton blockbusters and tens of thousands of incendiaries dropped on the toolmaking and war industrial city of half a million population, which is a neighbor of bombed-out Essen and a canal crossroads of the blasted Ruhr.

Four Per Minute

They said the raid was the heaviest of the year and estimated that 2-ton bombs were dropping at the rate of four per minute in the massive quenching of defenses and destruction of war production.

The official German version from the daily Berlin communique said:

"Last night British bombers attacked western Germany and dropped numerous high explosives and incendiary bombs, mainly on residential quarters in the city of Dortmund. The population suffered losses. Major damage was caused to buildings in the town. Thirty-six bombers, mainly four-engined, were shot down by night fighters and air force antiaircraft artillery, according to news received so far."

Then, commenting on a German raid which the British dismissed as trivial, the Berlin communique added:

"A strong formation of heavy German bombers dropped numerous explosive and incendiary bombs on targets in southeast England on the night of May 4."

Incidental Previously

Dortmund has been only an incidental target of previous R. A. F. missions until it was singled out last night for the greatest blow delivered by the R. A. F. heavyweights. It was noted that while Cologne became synonymous with destruction from the air because bombers used on the historic raid about a year ago, some of them were of the lighter two-engine types.

Dortmund thus became the first German city to feel the full weight of the biggest heavyweight air fleet marshaled anywhere in the war for a single devastating blow.

"Nothing could have survived those flames," said one "Canadian pilot officer. "The destruction was bigger than any of us had ever seen before."

"It came right up out of the bowles of the earth and belched flames up to 2000 feet," said another awe-struck Canadian in describing the fires that rose over the thundering explosions.

An R. A. F. spokesman said the aerial offensive was keeping four out of five German night fighters pinned down on the defense of Europe and that Goering's air force was outnumbered on the three main fronts—Russia, Africa and Europe—and has lost the battle of production as well.

In a smaller stab into the continent before breakfast today, R. A. F. typhoons blew up the ammunition supply in one of three armed ships near the mouth of the Seine.

In another daylight sweep, the R. A. F. planes attacked trains and barges in the Dunkerque area.

Key Named Successor To Andrews

MAJOR GENERAL KEY

By the Associated Press

London, May 5.—Maj. Gen. William S. Key, a National Guard officer and senior general of the United States Army in the European theater of operations, is temporary commander of all American Army troops in the European theater, succeeding the late Lieut. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, it was announced today.

He had been provost marshal general of the command since last October.

Maj. Gen. Key is 53 and a native of Alabama. Married and father of three children, his home is at 600 Culbertson Drive, Oklahoma City, Okla.

He began his military career with the Georgia National Guard in 1907 as an enlisted man.

In World War I he served on the staff of the Forty-second Division and with the Seventh Division. He also saw service on the Mexican Border in 1916-17.

Between war service he was in the oil business in Oklahoma, with extensive real estate holdings in Oklahoma City. He was warden of Oklahoma Penitentiary in 1924-27 and Works Progress Administrator of the State, 1935-37. In 1938 he came within a few thousand votes of winning the Oklahoma governorship.

He has been a major general since April, 1937, rising to that rank in the Oklahoma National Guard.

In a statement today Major General Key said:

"In the tragic death of General Andrews the European theater of operations suffered the loss of a great commander—one in whose leadership and ability we had the greatest confidence.

"He possessed those qualities of character which endeared him to all ranks. He was an ideal soldier and his passing is a personal loss to each of us."

Antwerp Raid 'in Key' Despite Gen. Hansell's Song Recital

By the Associated Press

London, May 5.—A flying general became a singing general during the United States heavy bomber raid on Antwerp Tuesday, bursting out with a request rendition of "The Man on the Flying Trapeze."

He is Brig. Gen. Heywood S. Hansell, commander of a bombardment wing, who went on the raid in the Flying Fortress "Chennault's Pappy," named after Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault of China fame.

Following custom, the crew asked the distinguished guest to sing over the ship's communications system on the way to Antwerp, and he did.

"They didn't seem to think a hell of a lot of my singing," said Hansell, whose wife and three children formerly lived at 2246 Fifty-ninth Street Northwest, Washington, and now reside at Indian Rock, Fla.

The main targets on the raid were the former Ford and General Motors plants, which have been taken over with the occupation of Belgium. Their importance to the Germans increased after the pulverizing raid of April 4 on the Renault factory near Paris, Eighth Airforce headquarters said.

"A preliminary study of reconnaissance data obtained from bombers during the attack indicates a heavy concentration of bombs in the target area," headquarters declared, adding the bombers also attacked quayside warehouses, hitting a plant making small Flak barges used in protecting harbor and offshore areas.

Sofia Traffic Halts as Police Hunt Assassin

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, May 5.—All transportation was stopped last night in the Bulgarian capital of Sofia as the police conducted a raid there in an effort to find the assassins of Col. Athanas Panteff, former police chief, who was killed Monday.

Other elements rebellious against the Axis dominated government of Bulgaria also were sought.

A Sofia dispatch disclosed a fear of more outbreaks by the Bulgar authorities. Yesterday, when funeral services were held for the former police chief, only representatives of the government, the military academy and close relatives were permitted to attend on special passes.

The Sofia radio, meanwhile, warned the people, hour after hour, to keep their windows closed and not go into the streets. Traffic was suspended; all stores save bakeries and milk shops were closed. Only children and servants, accompanied by soldiers, were permitted at certain hours to go into the streets to shop.

Trouble also stirred in Hungary, another Axis Balkan satellite. The regent, Admiral Nicholas Horthy, who recently returned from a war conference with Hitler, suspended parliament sine die on the proposal of his foreign minister, Nicolas Kallay.

A dispatch from Budapest quoted Kallay as having said "Certain events show that all deputies do not have a sense of parlimentary responsibilities," and that they had "asked questions not considered opportune at the present moment."

The government, Kallay was represented as having added, was "firmly resolved to hold the initiative in foreign and domestic political questions," and for that reason proposed the parliamentary adjournment.

Clergy Mourn Bishop Leonard; President Pays Tribute to Him

The tragic passing of Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, Washington Methodist resident prelate, in a plane crash in Iceland while touring the world's battlefronts, yesterday drew expressions of sorrow from President Roosevelt and church leaders of the Nation's Capital.

The President, at whose suggestion the prelate went abroad, said that "a powerful influence is lost to the spiritual life of the Nation" in the bishop's death. "He was especially equipped by temperament and experience to represent leading American Protestant denominations in a tour of the global war fronts in the interest of the spiritual welfare of our armed forces," the President said in a telegram to the family.

Loss to Men at Front

"His lamented passing in the midst of this great service is a loss to the men at the front, to the great church of which he was so long a moving spirit, and to the religious forces of the Nation as a whole."

The bishop's widow, Mrs. Louella Day Leonard, has been staying in Morristown, N. J., her native city, during the prelate's absence.

Tour Mark of Unity

Dr. S. Arthur Devan, director, and Dr. William B. Pugh, vice chairman, of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, of which Bishop Leonard was chairman and as whose representative he was making the trip abroad, last night issued a statement, which said in part:

"His tour was an unprecedented example of the growing unity of Protestantism, since he carried an official message from organizations comprising more than 30 million Protestant communicants to their brothers and sons abroad.

"Bishop Leonard was nearing the close of a long and distinguished career as a leader in American church and educational life. The withdrawal of his energy and leadership will be felt not only in connection with the Protestant chaplaincy, to the interests of which he actively devoted himself, but in many phases of important national religious efforts."

"Bishop Leonard was a man of intense energy and complete devotion to the church," commented Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, Washington Federation of Churches' executive secretary. "No one worked harder than he; life for him was full of pressing duties and he never shrank from a task or cause which to him was important."

Drs. John R. Edwards and Horace E. Cromer, who as superintendents of the West and East Washington Methodist districts, were closely associated with Bishop Leonard, expressed regret at his death.

Careful Administrator

"Bishop Leonard was one of the most careful administrators the church had," said Dr. Cromer. "He has been an outstanding leader in the educational field and had given himself to the matter of the chaplains and the spiritual ministry of the church for the armed forces unsparingly. He was responsible more than anyone else for the position of the Methodist Church in its relation to the Army and Navy.

"Through his death, Washington Methodism sustains an irreparable loss," declared Dr. Edwards. "He was noted for his courage in administration, his remarkable capacity for work and his great and fearless patriotism."

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, who was associated with Bishop Leonard on the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, characterized Bishop Leonard as "a man of fine intellectual poise, a forceful preacher and an excellent administrator."

Governor Orders Probe of Missouri Prison Brutality

Jefferson City, Mo., May 5 (AP).—Prompted by an escaped convict's story of brutalities, Gov. Forrest C. Donnell instructed State prison officials today to give him a detailed statement of all types of punishment used in Missouri's penal system.

Winfred Meyers, who escaped with four others through a prison ventilator last week, told police who arrested him in Cleveland that Missouri convicts "are hung by chained wrists to the ceiling with their toes barely touching the floor, and are left for eight-hour stretches. Guards go about cracking heads for no reason at all."

Corregidor Called 'Our Holy Grail'

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Thursday), May 6 (AP).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commemorating the fall of Corregidor, described in a statement today the island fortress as symbolizing "the honor of a Nation."

Noting that Corregidor, the fortress in Manila Bay to which a few United States forces retreated after the fall of Bataan, "surrendered a full year ago today," the general continued:

"Intrinsically it is but a barren war-worn rock, hallowed as so many other places by death and disaster.

"Yet it symbolizes within itself that priceless, deathless thing, the honor of a Nation.

"Until we lift our flag from its dust, we stand unredeemed before mankind.

"Until we claim again the ghastly remnants of its last gaunt garrison, we can but stand, humble supplicants, before Almighty God.

March Salvage Of Fats in D. C. 49,991 Pounds

More than 428 tons of waste fats were collected during March from house wives and restaurants in the District, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and Pennsylvania, WPB's Salvage Division reported yesterday.

The report disclosed that Pennsylvania collected 590,858 pounds; Maryland, 122,940; Delaware, 23,976; Virginia, 69,276, and the District, 49,991.

Although an important contribution to the war effort for the manufacture of explosives, the amount of fat collected was only 44.1 per cent of the quota set for the region, the division said.

The report said nation-wide collection amounted to 7,312,617 pounds, or 43.9 per cent of the national quota. Florida, with a collection percentage of 105.2, led the country.

Damage Suit Lost By Oil Company

Superior, Wis., May 5 (AP).—A directed verdict in favor of seven major oil companies was ordered by Federal Judge Patrick T. Stone today in a $750,000 damage suit brought by the Northwestern Oil Co., of Superior.

Judge Stone held that Northwestern had failed to prove it suffered damages to its business or property as the result of a conspiracy to fix prices it alleged the defendant firms had committed. The firms were Socony-Vacuum, Phillips Petroleum, Pure Oil, Shell Oil, Sinclair Refining, Continental Oil and Mid-Continent Petroleum Products.

Senate Committee Rejects Provision For Canal Funds

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday rejected by a 16-to-14 vote an amendment to the 1944 War Department civil functions bill to provide funds for the Florida barge canal.

The vote was announced by Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, acting chairman, after a comparatively brief session.

A subcommittee previously had approved an appropriation of $28,000,000 for starting work on the cross-Florida ditch, for whtich proponents had requested $44,000,000.

Italian Propaganda Stresses U. S. Raids

War Sidelights

Mussolini Sees Return To Africa

Premier Mussolini in a brief address from the balcony of Palazzo Venezia in Rome asserted yesterday that Italians were incurably afflicted with "the African illness" and surely would return to Africa.

Il Duce, according to the Rome broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, recalled that it was on May 5, 1936, that he announced the creation of the Italian empire after the fall of Ethiopia.

220 Ships Aid Allies

London, May 5 (AP).—The Admiralty said today that the navies of the German-occupied countries which are fighting with the United Nations total 220 combat ships and 26,700 men.

The Royal Netherlands navy leads with 63 ships and 6850 men.

Others include: Fighting French, 49 ships and 6150 men; Norwegian, 53 ships and 5100 men; Greek, 33 ships and 5450 men; Polish, 12 ships and 2,600 men; Yugoslavia, three ships and 200 men; Belgian, seven ships and 350 men.

The ships range from cruisers to minesweepers.

6-Hour Atlantic Mark

Montreal, May 5 (AP).—Less than a week after announcing a new North Atlantic flying record, the Royal Air Force Transport Command came up today with another new one—a landfall-to-landfall mark of six hours and 12 minutes from Newfoundland to Britain in a fully loaded Liberator bomber.

The Transport Command announced that Capt. G. R. (Sam) Buxton of the British Overseas Airways Corporation, operating with the transport command, had sliced eight minutes from Capt. W. S. May's record, also made in a Liberator.

Axis Still Trying To Block Sympathy For Allied Cause

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Official Italy is whipping up hatred for Americans to kill off an apparent feeling of sympathy in that country for an Allied invasion, OWI Director Elmer Davis told his press conference yesterday.

Italian propagandists, he said, have pounced on recent American bombing raids over Italy to accuse United States fliers of machine-gunning civilians.

"The zeal with which they go at this propaganda indicates that they fear are invasion would meet with a favorable reception by the great number of Italians who are tired of being ruled by the Germans," the information chief declared.

Raids Get Top Play

OWI's Foreign Service Division has been told that Italian Fascists are giving top play to American raids over Italy. Cities which suffered from raids have been entered on a "roll of honor."

Meanwhile, Italian propagandists are feeding the people at home with the theme summed up in the following excerpt from an Italian announcement: "These barbarous attacks against women and children are far from breaking Italian morale and are engendering an implacable hatred of the enemy."

At the same time, Italians are being told that their country is being bombed so often to soften the home front because of inability of the English and Americans to beat "numerically-inferior Italians" in Tunisia.

OWI In Russia Planned

Davis reported that March was a "bad month" for ship losses from enemy submarine activity. Losses in April, he added, were only half that of March. He stressed that the good showing in April may not be maintained in succeednig months.

While pointing out that many factors such as skill of competing commanders and luck had a bearing on ship losses, Davis said that it will be several months before the full weight of the United States destroyer-escort construction program can be brought to bear against enemy submarines.

Davis revealed that an OWI branch outpost is planned in Russia, although negotiations are presently being held up by Russian consideration of the project.

2 Dead Chaplains Well Known Here

Born in New York State

Colonel Miller, who has been on duty at the Chief of Chaplains' Office since 1940, was a Presbyterian, and lived with his wife and two sons at 1920 Thirty-fifth Street Northwest. They are Frank, jr., 20, a George Washington University medical student, and John, 10.

He was born in New York State 51 years ago, and received his bachelor of arts degree from Marysville (Tenn.) College in 1914.

After graduating from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1917, he served his first and only pastorate—that of Stirling (N. J.) Presbyterian Church, for five years, then went to the Chaplains' School at Fort Leavenworth in 1925, and to Columbia University in 1927-28, where he received a master of arts degree.

While serving his pastorate he obtained a leave of absence and became a chaplain, serving for the duration of the first World War, and in 1920 gave up his pastoral work to become a chaplain in the regular Army, serving for 22 years in the United States, the Canal Zone and Hawaii. He came here two years ago from Fort Jackson, South Carolina.

Lynchburg Graduate

Major Humphrey, who saw active duty in France during World War I, entered the Army as a chaplain, April 23, 1941.

A graduate in ministry of Lynchburg College, the chaplain had served the Lynchburg district Methodist churches for 14 years before entering the Army. He had charge also of churches in the Petersburg and Rappahannock districts and in Danville.

He was active in Boy Scout work and ruritan activities throughout the Piedmont section. Mrs. Humphrey, who lives in Lynchburg, said that although she did not receive official word from the Adjutant General's office until yesterday, she was certain of her husband's death as soon as the news of the crash was made public.

He had written her from his post in England that he was to accompany the bishop on the trip, she said, stating that it would be his first airplane journey. She received this letter last week.

FBI Tipped On Krug Visit By Rintelen

HANS KRUG

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 5.—Dietrich Walter Rintelen, a German alien, was disclosed today as the man who informed Federal Bureau of Investigation agents that Max Stephan brought Oberlieutnant Hans Peter Krug, fugitive from a Canadian prison camp, to the store of Theodore Donay here on April 18, 1942.

Stephan, since convicted of treason for aiding Krug's flight, and Donay, Detroit importer now on trial in Federal Court charged with misprision of treason, are German-born naturalized American citizens.

Rintelen, former storekeeper for Donay, was a Government witness today in the trial in which Donay is charged with knowing of Stephen's treason and failing to notify Government authorities.

He testified that within two hours after seeing Stephen, Donay and Krug in what he described as "a very secret conversation," he telephoned the FBI from an outside pay station. Two days later, he said, Donay told him never to mention to anyone he had seen Krug and Stephan in the store.

FBI Charges Threat To Heidinger's Son

The Justice Department announced yesterday that a man it identified as Roy Grundy Miller, 43, a farmer living near Fairfield, Ill., had been arrested on a charge of attempting to extort $25,000 from James S. Heidinger, of Fairfield, by threatening the lives of his family.

Heidinger is the son of United States Representative James V. Heidinger, Illinois Republican. The F. B. I. said that Miller had confessed.

Sweden, in a Precarious Role, Clings to Neutrality

cratic cause. The movie, "Mrs. Miniver," had a record run in Stockholm. Shirer's "Berlin Diary" is a best-seller, over 100,000 copies having been sold here. Steinbeck's "The Moon Is Down" drew large audiences at leading theaters. When the new German minister, Hans Thomsen, entered a protest, according to a report, the foreign office pointed out that the play did not designate the "cruel invaders" by nationality. Sweden is always correct in its neutrality.

That is one-half of the picture. On the other hand, Sweden is forced to make constant concessions to Germany. Foremost is the transit of traffic across Sweden between Germany and Norway. Between the Swedish port of entry and Oslo one train is running daily in each direction, bearing Nazi troops to and from home leave. On a more limited scale the Nazis are carried between Finland and Norway. Materials, including some munitions, also are carried. One estimate by Allied observers puts this at 250,000 tons for 1941, and greater in 1942.

Britain and America are repeatedly protesting against this traffic. The British press recently carried articles putting the traffic at a figure which the Swedes say is greatly exaggerated. The British press also charges Sweden with other aid to the Nazis, such as supplying Diesel engines and repairing motor trucks.

Papers Against Nazis

The important point, however, is that Sweden's own press, or a section of it, is constantly leading public opinion to take a stronger hand against concessions to the Nazis. Leading in this has been Dr. Segerstedt's courageous Handels Tidningen of Gothenburg. But even such semiofficial papers as Social Demokraten, representing the majority party, have pointed to violations of strict neutrality.

Knowledge of the background throws light on their problem. The German demand for transit of troops came first three years ago, during the attack on Norway. Sweden refused, on the ground that fighting was in progress, and therefore such troop movements would violate Sweden's neutrality. When the fighting ended in June the Nazis came back and renewed their request, saying that hostilities had now ended, and the question was merely one of garrisoning the occupation forces. In the face of this argument Sweden could find no reason to refuse. A serious gap in this policy was when the Swedish government allowed passage of an armed division sent from Norway to Finland at the outbreak of the Nazi war on Russia.

In the event of an Allied invasion of Norway, hostilities would be resumed, and the Swedes then seemingly would have to stand on their previous position, and end transit of traffic at a time when it would be most important to the Nazis. Traffic has always been controlled with Swedish military guards on each train, and Nazis are not allowed to carry weapons en route.

Quite apart from technical formalities, Swedish public opinion is mounting against the continuance of this traffic. It is possible that it might be stopped, or greatly reduced, even though the status quo in the north of Europe remains unchanged. Recent demonstrations over the sinking of the submarine Ulven showed unprecendented vigor, when disciplined Swedes demonstrate to the extent that it is necessary to fire blank shots, that is news, indeed.

The harsh fact remains that Sweden depends on Germany for its industrial existence. Miracles have been worked in the wood industry, with thousands of motorcars and motorboats converted to charcoal gas. On every Stockholm quay are great piles of wood. Heat in homes during the long northern winter might not be possible without German coal.

Needs German Fuel

But Sweden's highly organized and efficient industry could not run without several million tons of fuel from Germany. German deliveries each year have fallen below the promised amount. In 1924 they were 33 per cent below promise, according to the report of Allied observers. If coal were stopped Sweden's means of rearming would be at an end.

To get coal, Sweden must send her iron to Germany. Swedish iron supplied about 20 per cent of German needs in 1941, according to outside observers, and may have increased since then. But the ratio is actually much greater.

Taking up strange tasks and doing unfamiliar jobs, an army of willing workers is mapping our way forward in the war behind-the-lines. They are the civilian fighters who serve unseen to bring us victory.

Some of them have their place in companies like this one, doing their extra share to fill the ranks where we have given men to the armed services.

Unseen, but unmistakable, there's a strange new importance to our familiar task of bringing warmth to Washington homes. We feel that everything we can do to maintain our standards of fuel quality established by our 45 years, is a contribution to the war effort for it is safeguarding the health of those unseen fighters here at the "hub of history."

Fathers' Lists To Be Made Up By Employers

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The Selective Service System took a major step yesterday in preparation for the drafting of fathers by advising so-called "essential" employers to list with local draft boards the names of all draft registrants in their employ "who maintain bona fide homes with children less than 18 years of age, born on or before September 14, 1942."

By so advising draft boards, employers will be assured of notice when draft boards begin reclassifying fathers from Class 3-A to make them available for induction, Selective Service said. Selective Service Form 42-B which provides for a 15-day notice before a registrant's classification is changed should be used.

Meanwhile, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service, advised the Senate Military Affairs Committee that drafting of fathers woud begin August 1 or earlier if present calls are to be be met.

Legislation Opposed

Hershey expressed his opposition to legislation to exempt fathers from induction into the armed services and to prohibit draft deferment of government workers. Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson also voiced opposition to the bill to end government deferments.

The work of draft boards preparing to induct fathers will be greatly simplified by possession of information on what employes may be eligible for occupational deferment, officials explained. Such employes previously had been segregated from others deferred for dependency and placed in Class 3-B which was abolished recently.

For such employes to receive continued deferment, application would have to be made by them or their employer for a full occupational deferment (2-A or 2-B) on Selective Service Form 42-A within 15 days after notice has been sent of an impending reclassification.

Some Fathers Going Now

The Selective Service announcement disclosed that the only fathers now being inducted are in one of the three following groups:

1. Farm workers who, without the permission of their local boards, leave agricultural pursuits for which they have been deferred.

2. Fathers employed on one of the activities or occupations listed by the War Manpower Commission as nondeferrable.

3. Post Pearl Harbor fathers who have no children born prior to September 14, 1942.

Meanwhile, Selective Service announced a clarification of its memorandum to local boards on the order in which men with dependents should be called. It was pointed out, however, that men with children, with the exception of those classes already being inducted, may not be drafted without the permission of National Selective Service headquarters.

Order Clarified

The clarification of the order of induction is as follows:

"When a local board is filling a call it shall first select and order to report for induction specified men who have voluntered for induction. To fill the balance of the call it shall from the groups listed below, and insofar as possible in the order in which the groups are listed, select and order to report for induction specified men finally classified in Class 1-A and Class 1-A-O who are available for induction:

"1. Men with no dependents. (All men not qualified for Group 2, Group 3, or Group 4, below, will for this purpose be considered as men with no dependents.)

"2. Men with collateral dependents, provided such status was acquired prior to December 8, 1941.

"3. Men who have wives with whom they maintain a bona fide family relationship in their homes, provided such status was acquired prior to December 8, 1941.

"4. Men who have children with whom they maintain a bona fide family relationship in their homes, provided such status was acquired prior to December 8, 1941. (Now limited to those who were placed in Class 1-A or Class 1-A-O because they left an agricultural occupation or endeavor essential to the war effort without the permission of their local boards or because they were engaged in nondeferrable activities or occupations.")

The Senate Military Affairs Committee postponed action on the two measures relating to deferments.

Stimson was disclosed to have told the committee that he believed the bill by Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, to prevent Government employes between the ages of 18 and 38 from receiving deferments would "be detrimental to the prosecution of the war."

While expressing the belief no individual should be deferred "solely by reason of being employed by the Federal Government," Stimson told the committee there are certain key Government positions now held by persons between 18 and 38 which require specific skills or ability.

'Stars' Arrive for Contracts Probe

tinue to be under subpena for testimony later.

Mrs. Smith, tall, slender, in black dress with white collar and black hat decorated with lace, bowed slightly, smiled and turned away.

Monroe testified that he paid her $700 to $900 a month for research work, rent for himself and his family in the R Street house, and for expenses. He said there was no formal agreement controlling these payments.

Monroe told the committee that his brother, Sam Kaplan, of 7 Vestrey Street, New York, is in the Office of Price Administration, as an advisor on textiles, but that "my brother never had any connection with me in a business way."

His brother, said Monroe, is a dollar-a-year man, and "I very rarely see him." When first asked, Monroe said that he didn't know with which board his brother was connected, but later identified it as the OPA.

At one point May told the witness to avoid personalities. This occurred after Monroe was asked whether an out-of-town firm, could get Government business without a broker. "Yes," said Monroe. "The ones that were backed by Mr. Forrestal's banking concern." James Forrestal, Undersecretary of the Navy, resigned in 1940 from the New York investment banking firm of Dillon, Reed and Co.

About his own business activities, Monroe said that in the past two years he had grossed about $45,000, had received several sizeable fees from firms seeking business, but that with two exceptions he had failed to get them contracts.

He said his was a "skimpy little business" for which he did not keep any books. He denied that he had put some $30,000 in the bank during the past seven months, but said he had made these deposits in a Washington bank: $2700 on October 15, $2800 on November 19, and the same amount on December 8, $2700 on December 19 and $200 in February. He said he didn't know what the amounts were for, but said "you can check my records."

At the start of the hearing William Harris, practicing attorney in New York and New Jersey, said he was attorney for Monroe, and asked that the hearing be adjourned until a later date. May promptly overruled the proposal and called for Monroe.

Nattily Dressed

Monroe, nattily dressed in dark blue suit, white shirt, and dark blue tie, came through the crowd, and walked into a barrage of photographers, flash bulbs. Holding a paper in his hand, he stood while pictures were taken.

A moment later Chairman May swore him as a witness, then declared "there is no desire on the part of this committee to smear you—we are trying to find facts relating to the war effort, we expect to get the truth and we are not interested in your social affairs except as they relate to the making of war contracts."

Monroe was given permission to read a statement he said he had "just jotted off." He read rapidly. The statement said that he had acted throughout to "benefit the war effort," that he came to Washington to seek reinstatement as an Army officer, and stayed on as a manufacturer's agent.

The next minute Monroe admitted getting a contract for $570,000 on behalf of the Sheboygan (Wis.) Construction Co. for feed bins for farmers. This contract was placed with the Commodity Credit Corp., he said, an Agriculture Department agency.

Monroe said the contract netted him a $10,000 fee.

When asked about his business connection with Fey, Monroe said that he had given Fey advice over the telephone because "he was a client of Mrs. Smith," and that he received no pay for it. He endorsed a $150 check from Fey to Mrs. Smith, Monroe said, "because she needed the cash and I cashed the check for her."

Monroe said that Fey did not come to the R Street house as a "war broker" but as the part owner of a stove company.

"Never has there been a war broker in my home to my knowledge," Monroe said. "Nor was one word of business ever spoken at dinner."

Parties For Best People

"There were never any orgies, never drunken parties, never wild parties, never lewd women," he said. Dinners at the R Street house, he said, were "simple dinner parties for the best and most intelligent people."

May rapped his gavel, and told Monroe and the committee counsel to get down again to business transactions.

Monroe said he received $1407.97 from the Aladdin Co. of Bay City, Mich., and that it was the only firm which had sent him a check last Monday. "All my other income you cut off," he said. He admitted getting $1500 as a commission from the Dulien Steel Products Co., of New York City, on the purchase of some rails, and two checks for $550 each from Duro Chrome Co. of St. Louis, Mo., and $1000 from the Woodworking Industries of Sheboygan, Mich.

As Burton reeled off questions about a number of other companies, Representative Short broke in to say "what's wrong with that," referring to payments made to Monroe, and Representative Shafer (Republican) of Michigan, asked "how many brokers are there in Washington?"

"Oh, man," drawled Monroe, "there must be 100,000."

Senate Passes Antistrike Bill, 63-16

final, subject only to court review on questions of law.

This interpretation was not discussed during the debate, but Senator Danaher said he thought it was understood.

Independent Status

Said Danaher: "This important section will give the board a separate and independent status which will derive from its statutory origin. It will not be dependent upon an executive order, nor will its orders be subject to executive review in cases arising under certification from the Conciliation Service or where the board acts under its own motion in permitted instances.

"The board would not be bound by some executive formula, but will be free to enter orders fair and equitable to employers and employes under all the circumstances of the case."

Section 3 of the Connally bill expressly provided that no orders of the board on wage adjustments in Government-owned plants could conflict "with any act of Congress or any executive order issued thereunder." But Danaher said his own amendment, not confined to Government-owned plants, would be controlling in all other cases, where he said the board in effect would operate as a free agent.

Additional Powers

Both the Danaher rider and an amendment previously offered by Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat) of New York would give the board the power it now lacks to require attendance of witnesses and production of books, documents and other papers. Under the Wagner amendment, failure to obey a WLB subpena would be subject to a $10,000 fine.

Many of the more drastic features of the Connally substitute bi, were toned down before passage, and completely stricken from the bill was a section authorizing the Attorney General to seek court injunctions to prevent strikes in Government-owned plants. The Senate similarly defeated, 45 to 34, the original Taft amendment, because it contained authority for the Government to seek injunctions against strikes following a decision of the board.

Criminal Penalties

Criminal penalties in the bill would impose up to $500 fine or one year in jail on persons who "coerce, instigate or induce any person to interfere by lockout, strike, slow-down, or other interruption" with the operation of a war needed plant.

The same penalties would apply against anyone giving "guidance" to a strike in a Government-owned plant, or providing funds "for the payment of strike, unemployment, or other benefits to those participating therein." At the request of Senator Wagner, Connally amended the penalty clause to exempt individual workers from liability because they refused to work.

Before final passage of the bill, the Senate rejected by a 15 to 15 tie vote an amendment by Senator William Langer (Republican) of North Dakota stipulating that there be no racial discrimination in plants taken over by the Government.

The bill must yet pass the House where some Senate Administration lieutenants expressed fear that sharper antilabor teeth will be added. The House in the last few years has been the first to move antistrike legislation, but all of the more drastic House bills have died in a Senate committee.

Senate Unit Opens Tax Study Today

Majority Seen Apparently Leaning Toward Some Form of Ruml Version

By Jack Bell
Associated Press Staff Writer

With a majority apparently leaning toward some version of the Ruml skip-a-year plan, the Senate Finance Committee will begin consideration today of the House-approved pay-as-you-go tax bill.

Chairman George (Democrat of Georgia asked Treasury representatives to appear at a closed hearing this morning. He said he saw no reason why the committee should not make major policy decisions later in the day, or tomorrow at the latest, and report a bill for Senate action next week.

The chief issue before the group aparently is whether to accept in principle the House-approved bill, which excuses about 90 per cent of taxpayers from 1942 levies, or to adopt a modified version of the Ruml plan under which all taxpayers except those with windfall incomes would skip payment of a full year's taxes.

The committee's eight Republicans and at least three of the twelve Democrats were reported to be inclined toward the latter course.

The House-approved measure would eliminate entirely the 1942 tax liability of single persons with incomes up to $2500 and married persons with incomes up to $3200. Others with higher incomes would have their liabilities cut substantially, but would pay regular levies on all income above that in the first two tax brackets.

Both this and the modified Ruml plan would impose a 20 per cent withholding tax on taxable portions of salaries and wages to effect current collection on income and victory levies.

Under the Ruml method, as redrafted by Representative Carlson (Republican) of Kansas, the 1942 liability would be wiped out for all persons with incomes up to $5000. On income above that amount, the 1941 or 1942 tax, whichever was lower, would be excused, with certain windfall provisions.

The committee's eight Republicans have already indicated their willingness to go along with the Ruml principle and Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan, the ranking member of this group, said they would take the Carlson plan under their wing and urge its adoption, although they might want some modifications.

In addition, Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri has announced he will offer his own version of the Ruml plan with a withholding tax, and Senators Radcliffe (Democrat) of Maryland and Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, said they leaned toward the Carlson proposal, if the committee is forced to choose between it and the House-approved bill.

"I don't think the House went far enough and I certainly favor the Carlson plan over the House bill," Radcliffe said.

Although George declined to comment directly on the House bill, he told reporters it always had been his idea that all taxpayers, big and small, ought to be treated alike when it came to abating a year's levies.

Rubber Drive Honors Paid To Oil Firms

The rubber collected in last year's Nation-wide scrap drive was sufficient to keep the reclaiming facilities of the Nation busy for a year and a half, Secretary Harold L. Ickes said yesterday.

"It is the rubber which has provided the tires which have kept thousands of automobiles in operatable condition . . . which has bridged a gap which otherwise could not have been bridged," he declared, "and it has not all been used even now."

Secretary Ickes spoke with other Cabinet members and high Government officials at a luncheon given in the Statler Hotel by the Petroleum Industry War Council in honor of the role played by the oil companies of America in conducting the drive.

Much Rubber on Hand

Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, chairman of the Government's Rubber Reserve Co., commenting on "misinformation about the rubber situation," stated that "17 months after Pearl Harbor, we still have several hundred thousand tons of raw rubber in stockpiles, a substantial amount of scrap rubber and used tires, as well as a good synthetic rubber program well under way."

By careful conservation and safeguarding our supplies, he declared, "we should meet all essential needs."

Paid $25 Per Ton

The Rubber Reserve Co., Jones declared, had paid $25 a ton for 452,000 tons collected by the oil industry at thousands of filling stations throughout the country and bought at about $20 a ton.

Four checks, representing almost two and a half million dollars in proceeds from the drive, were donated in equal amounts to the four national service organizations —the American Red Cross, the Army Emergency Relief, the Navy Relief Society, and the USO. This was in accordance with the industry's announced program that whatever difference the oil companies received between the amount they paid for scrap and the amount received from its sale to the Government would be donated to these organizations.

The checks were received by Robert F. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, for the Army; Admiral J. King, commander in chief of the United States fleet, for the Navy; Vice Chairman James K. McClintock, for the Red Cross, and President Chester I. Barnard for the USO.

Tribute was paid the industry and the millions of Americans who contributed to the success of the rubber drive by Donald F. Nelson, WPB chief, and Justice James F. Byrnes, economic stabilization director.

Justice Byrnes, who represented President Roosevelt at the luncheon, turned the checks over to the four service organizations. "I am made happy doing this," he said, "because it is the first time since last October 3 that I have had an opportunity to give anybody anything they really wanted."

Wounded Soldier's Associates Donate Blood to Red Cross Here

When they learned that Corpl. Henry G. Sanborn, U. S. Army Air Corps, a former associate, was lying wounded in a hospital in North Africa, 16 agents of the downtown district, Washington office, Metropolitan life Insurance Co., decided to give their blood to the American Red Cross blood plasma bank.

Corporal Sanborn, whose home is at 1515 Rhode Island Avenue, where his wife lives, was inducted in February, 1942, and has been overseas for several months.

Former Internes Of Freedmen's Cancel Meeting

The Association of Former Internes of Freedmen's Hospital has canceled its annual three-day scientific meetings for the duration, Dr. George L. Johnson, chairman of publicity, has announced.

Dr. C. Wendall Freeman, executive secretary, cited the problems of transportation and the fact that many members are in the armed forces or are engaged in civilian defense activities.

The association, which was organized in Newark, N. J., in 1919, now has a membership of more than 400 physicians practicing in 30 States and many foreign countries.

Another Allied Convoy Reported

London, May 5 (AP).—The Paris radio broadcast a report today from La Linea, Spain, which asserted that another big Allied convoy had sailed from Gibraltar, comprising among other ships 20 transports loaded with landing barges and armored vehicles. La Linea is opposite Gibraltar.

Congressman's Son Missing

Second Lieut. Harry Wallace Baldwin, 22, son of Representative and Mrs. H. Streett Baldwin, has been "missing in action" in North Africa since April 16, it was learned here yesterday.

Representative Baldwin (Democrat), of Towson, Md., represents Maryland's second legislative district in Congress. He could not be reached at his office yesterday, where it was said the family was completely distraught over the news, sent them Monday by the War Department.

Enlisting in the air service upon graduation from the Johns Hopkins University in 1940, Lieutenant Baldwin won his wings as an Army Air Forces fighter pilot in October 1942. He was assigned to England a month later and was sent to Africa in January of this year. There he was a member of the first defense wing of the fighter command in Africa.

Japs Speeding Defense Work In Solomons

By John Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

The first report of an American air attack on a new Japanese base in the central Solomons indicated yesterday that the enemy is working feverishly to bolster his outer defenses against the gradually tightening ring of American bases.

A Navy communique related that on last Tuesday, Solomons time, American fighter, torpedo and dive bombing planes struck at enemy installations at Vanga Vanga and at Ringi Cove on Kolombangara Island, about 185 nautical miles northwest of Guadalcanal airfield and about 125 from the new American base in the Russell Islands.

A fire was started at Vanga Vanga, the communique said, and "smoke was observed in the Ringi Cove area." Navy men here said they were without information as to the nature of the Japanese installation. Those on Vanga Vanga apparently were set up only recently, but the Japanese have been in Ringi Cove some months.

Now that the United States has moved into Allice Islands in the south central Pacific, has disclosed the occupation of the Russells north of Guadalcanal, and has brought increasing pressure to bear on Kiska in the Aleutians, the assumption here is that the Japanese are devoting every ounce of energy to the strengthening of their positions in anticipation of hard fighting ahead.

Some authorities here already are of the opinion the enemy can be thrown out of Kiska only by American troops landing under fire and fighting with guns, bayonets and grenades. Months of aerial pounding have not forced the Japanese to withdraw.

Vanga Vanga is but the latest of a series of defensive points on Kolombangara Island to come under American attack. On April 29 American planes struck at Pelpeli and Gatere. Prior to that they had bombed Vila, another Kolombangara harbor.

Today's communique told of a new attack on Vila by Flying Fortresses and also of a raid on Rekata Bay on Santa Isabel Island where a fire was started. Rekata Bay was one of the seaplane bases from which the Japanese operated against Guadalcanal last summer and fall. The installations there once were flattened and burned by bombing attack but the Japanese have recently restored the place.

In the north Pacific, the communique reported, nine attacks were carried out against enemy installations on Kiska Island Monday. These raids resulted in fires in the Japanese camp and hits "in other areas."

Dr. James N. Greer, Jr., Elected Medical Society Head for '44

Dr. James N. Greer, jr., was elected president of the District Medical Society last night at the annual business meeting held at club headquarters, 1718 M Street Northwest. He will take office July 1, 1944.

Other officers elected were Dr. Custis Lee Hall, first vice president; Dr. Carolyn H. S. Pincock, second vice president; Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, to the executive board; Dr. L. Lee Cockerille, member of the board of censors; Dr. Coursen B. Cochrane, A. M. A. delegate, and Dr. Arthur C. Christie, alternate delegate. These officers will take office in July with Incoming President Dr. Fred R. Sanderson, who was elected in 1942.

Dr. John B. Nichols, pioneer Washington physician and past president of the society, was presented with a citation for meritory service on behalf of the group by Dr. William J. Mallory, whom Dr. Nichols, 30 years ago sponsored for membership in the same society.

Speaker of the meeting was Senator Harold H. Burton (Republican) of Ohio, who was introduced by his Bowdoin College classmate, Dr. Howard F. Cain, member of the society.

Urging planning now for victory and insured peace, he said that citizens have as much of a job as the soldier and should take their part as seriously. We must work now toward a program that will be passed by two-thirds of the Senate. We must get out of partisan politics, we must stop World War III now, he said.

To win the war, he said citizens must do their full share on the farm and in industry to keep every man possible in the armed forces by cutting absenteeism and strikes. They must discipline themselves to pay and impose taxes, rations, keep wages down, buy bonds, and they must see to it that they write letters of encouragement and cheer to those they know at the front.

Veteran, Almost 102, Dies Here

Albert Milton Lathrop, who would have bene 102 years old in July, died yesterday at his home, 1321 Euclid Street Northwest.

Sightless for nearly four years, the Connecticut-born Nebraska pioneer and Civil War veteran maintained an alert interest in current affairs and the history he had lived through until his death. His daughters, Miss Edith Lathrop and Mrs. Susan E. Myer, with whom he lived, read newspapers to him, especially items on political and war developments, which interested him most. One of his grandsons, Pvt. Dixwell Lathrop, is now in Army camp at Camp Polk, La.

As Pvt. Albert Lathrop, he enlisted in the Union Army on his twenty-first birthday and fought at Winchester, Summit's Point, New Market, Piedmont, Lynchburg, Lexington and Buchanan. After the Federal rout at Winchester, he fled on foot to Pennsylvania.

Two months after the war ended he was mustered out of the Army. He married and settled in Connecticut as farmer and school teacher. He moved to Nebraska in 1872 where he lived for 54 years and was at 83 still active as an educator, buisnessman and civic leader.

On his hundredth birthday, here in Washington, Senator George W. Norris, who was then celebrating his own birthday joined Lathrop in a reception. Senator Hugh A. Butler and Representative Carl T. Curtis also attended, along with many other friends.

In addition to Miss Lathrop and Mrs. Myers, Lathrop is survived by a son Chelsea I. Lathrop, of Harvard, Nebr., five grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Services will be conducted tomorrow at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest, at 11 a. m. by Dr. U. G. B. Pierce, pastor of All Soul's Unitarian Church. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

POST PEOPLE

John Riseling

Want to know if you are important in Washington? One test is whether you've ever been phoned in the dead of night by John Riseling, night city editor of The Washington Post. The Associated Press has qualms about calling people after midnight, but Riseling hasn't, and he has probably awakened more nationally famous men than anyone else in newspaper history. It only bounced once—a certain Senator (who didn't like The Post anyhow) was so mad that he called The Post's publisher at 3 A. M. just for revenge. Calling national figures to verify facts or get more information on a just-before-deadline news flash is really a sideline for John Riseling; his specialty is local Washington news. Other newspaper men say of him admiringly that he knows the city like a book—geographically, politically, economically, socially. Every minute means something to the man in the city editor's chair at night; he's working against press times and he has to know the shortcuts—where to get the news quickly and how, which includes knowing whom to call up. There's an air of immediacy on the night assignment but it doesn't disturb John's calm. After 24 years on the city desk he's rather used to emergencies. Some of the most important local news stories he has handled on the desk were the Knickerbocker theater disaster, the Kann's warehouse fire, the recent sniper, Eklund and Catoe murders, and the still unsolved cases of the Limerick murder and the Mary Baker murder. Riseling started as a copy boy on the Philadelphia Inquirer, has worked in every newspaper department except the press room and cast his lot permanently with the news department at the time of the great flu epidemic. Riseling came to Washington in August, 1914, "to fill in for two weeks." He's been here ever since.

Mass Celebrated For Rose French; Burial Is Here

Requiem mass for Rose Ann French, secretary to Congressman Englebright of California, who died Sunday night at her home, Harrowgate Apartments, 1833 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, was celebrated yesterday at St. Paul's Catholic Church. Burial was in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Born in Burlington, Iowa, Miss French came to Washington during World War I to work in the Ordnance Division of the War Department. A year later she became assistant clerk to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, then secretary to Congressman Radcliffe of New Jersey. She was secretary to Congressman Englebright for 17 years.

Miss French was a member of the Daughters of Isabella, serving as financial secretary, and also was corresponding secretary of the Washington Auxiliary of the National Catholic Society of Social Service.

She is survived by two brothers, Alfred H. French, Galesburg, Ill., and Joe French, Oakland, Calif., and two sisters, Mrs. Peggy Henry, Los Angeles, Calif., and Mrs. Edna Schryer of Washington.

50% of Blindness Held Preventable

Boston, May 5 (AP).—Declaring that 50 per cent of all blindness is preventable and that 25 per cent of those reported as blind have remediable conditions, State Director William H. McCarthy of the Division of Blind announced today that Massachusetts next month would become the first State in the Nation to require registration of its blind.

Dr. Hugo B. C. Riemer, chairman of the Medical Advisory Committee, described the new law as "a step forward to the prevention of unnecessary blindness."

on hand—"and that's the way it's been lately."

The American Service Center at Wisconsin Avenue and Ellicott Street Northwest, another of a number of wholesalers and retailers checked, declared that their supply at the moment should last two or three days, but also asserted the station had been down to a day and a half level as recently as last week.

Similarly, wholesale dealers said their stocks were low, "near the bottom," with no immediate assurance of an appreciable replenishing of tanks. Another major dealer was reported as on the verge of announcing last week that he absolutely had no gas when a stop-gap shipment arrived with enough to last a few days.

Drivers Must Cooperate

OPA officials stressed that the "hand to mouth" basis wil continue indenitely, thus necessitating complete cooperation of all motorists. It was indicated elsewhere that some relief may come in July when new pipelines begin operating full force and barge shipments increase.

Reflecting the seriousness of the gasoline situation all along the East Coast, Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown declared that instructions are being issued to OPA district offices to assign all available investigators to clean up abuses of B and C gasoline book driving restrictions.

Local OPA officials, Brown said, are being instructed to confer with State and local community officials to work out arrangements for police reporting of driving abuses.

Numbers to Be Taken

"The procedure," he stressed, "will not call for 'snooping' and we are not going to stop cars on the highway. However, where the circumstances obviously indicate that B and C rations are being used for nonessential purposes, drivers will be interviewed by police and OPA investigators where possible to screen out nonviolators.

"Where that cannot be done, the license numbers will be noted and the drivers will be asked to explain to OPA district office or local rationing board."

Brown revealed that it is planned to check motorists violating general driving ordinances to see if they also are violating gasoline rationing restrictions.

Close Watch on Drivers

Another part of the drive will be to keep a close watch on motorists at resorts, recreation spots, race tracks and other places of amusement. Violators will not only have their present rations revoked but their right to any further rations will be suspended for an appreciable time, Brown said.

"The campaign follows a recent survey indicating that the "honor system" of controlling excess driving apparently had failed. Although reluctant to impose new, rigid bans on driving, Brown is said to have adopted the present campaign as the next best thing before radical action is found to be necessary.

"The great mass of people who have A, B, or C books are accepting in good spirit the limitations upon driving," Brown pointed out.

WOMEN!
Here's How YOU Can Help Win the War

"Mademoiselle," the popular magazine for women, calls work in an office or in a store NECESSARY WORK for the war effort.

"Mademoiselle" is right, especially in Washington. When you work as a stenographer for a public service company . . . like the department stores and restaurants . . . you are doing NECESSARY work to help WIN THE WAR.

Why are these jobs so important in helping the war effort? The answer is clear, war workers would find it impossible to keep up their war work. Government girls would soon go back home if they had to take a day off to get waited on every time they needed something in a store. Government executives would find it hard to get their important work out if they had long delays for their meals every day. Charge account customers (a high percentage of war workers are) would find it more than annoying if the stores did not have enough office personnel to keep the accounts straight. And so it goes on down the list.

While you are doing this necessary work you are earning money with which to buy more War Bonds, too.

John L. Lewis

The temperamental head of the United Mine Workers Union, Mr. John L. Lewis, has been told flatly that the War Labor Board will resume consideration of the coal industry dispute at 11 o'clock this morning, with or without the honor of his presence. It would be well for Mr. Lewis to attend. The members of his union are entitled to expect their chief to represent their interests in hearings of such importance. But whether or not he does so, they can be sure from the character and composition of the panel that their side of the case will be given full and fair consideration.

John Lewis is still trying to make his miners believe that the WLB is packed against him. Since he has control of most of the channels of communication to the members of the union, he may succeed in deluding them on this score. Moreover, he is still attempting to circumvent the WLB. In the statement he issued on Sunday he sought to give the impression that he had conferred with Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Dr. John Steelman together and that they had agreed to participate in this circumvention. In point of fact, Dr. Steelman was not present at the Ickes-Lewis meeting, and Mr. Ickes has made it altogether plain that he intends to uphold the WLB's authority in the fullest measure. In the Secretary of the Interior, John Lewis has met a man quite as obdurate and forthright as himself; he is most unlikely to cajole or bulldoze Harold Ickes into any sort of compromise on matters of principle.

If he chooses to continue his defiance of the Government by refusing to appear before the WLB, John Lewis can succeed in aggravating an already difficult situation. Then the miners will have to choose between his leadership and the President's. It is heartening to know that the Administration is not going to fudge or flinch in forcing this choice.

Andy Andrews

Let us mourn with the Army the death of Lieut. Gen. Frank Maxwell Andrews, our commander in chief in the European theater, in a flying accident over Iceland. He is the greatest single loss we have suffered in this war. He had served successively at the head of the Caribbean defense command, the Middle East command and the European command. In all these posts he had done a superb job, both in organization and in communicating his own buoyant and combative spirit to the American troops.

There was nobody quite like the warm-hearted "Andy," except perhaps the man whom he succeeded in 1920 in command of the air occupation forces in Germany, Gen. "Billy" Mitchell. General Andrews was a flying general. Not for a minute did he live apart from his passion for air power. And, like Mitchell, he suffered for it. In 1939 he was reduced in rank from a major general to a colonel and sent to San Antonio, where he languished till the following year, when he was rescued by presidential order. The specific cause of his demotion is not in the record. It is said that he made himself a nuisance to the longbowmen of the Army by insisting on the four-engine bomber. At the time he was commanding general of the G. H. Q. Air Force. "Give me four engines, or take these stars," is the defiant way he is said to have put it. They took his stars, but, praise be, the four-engine bomber was put into our air program.

Andrews was the leader of as gallant a group as has ever distinguished the American Army. All of them shared Andy's passion. They served with him in the Headquarters Air Force which was set up in 1935. This was the first step toward building an organization for air power in this country. Prior to that time, according to William Bradford Huie, in the Fight for Air Power, "all the airplanes we had were attached to the various corps areas. Most of the squadrons were still called 'observation squadrons,' and the General Staff had not admitted that the airplane had any function other than to accompany the Army to which it was attached and to aid in tactical operations." Andy had on his staff such enthusiasts as General Kenney, General McNarney, General Bradley, Colonel Knerr. They proceeded to develop the doctrine for the employment of air power which is guiding the conduct of this war.

General Andrew's influence as a trail blazer for air power is part of the annals of our Army. Had he lived he would have added new laurels to his fame as an organizer and as a leader of men. That he should have died in the way he did is the more lamentable. It was said of the 59-year-old Andrews that he never allowed another man either to land or take off when he was in a plane. Doubtless he was at the controls when the crash occurred that killed him. His death should provoke an order from the War Department that no officer in any responsible command should be his own pilot. Men of the caliber of General Andrews should not be allowed to risk their lives needlessly.

Tax Progress

At once to forgive and to collect taxes was the fiscal legerdemain attempted by the Doughton bill. This sly effort was rejected by the House on Tuesday in choosing instead to put its stamp of approval on the Robertson-Forand bill. In so doing the House went a long way toward embracing pay-as-you go taxation.

The Robertson-Forand compromise would remit the first 19 per cent of the 1942 tax liability of all taxpayers from the lowest to the highest income classifications. Since an estimated 90 per cent of all taxpayers fall within the 6 per cent normal and the 13 per cent first surtax groups, the effect of the bill is to put all but 10 per cent of taxpayers on a completely current basis. Although this 10 per cent remainder would be "forgiven" only part of their 1942 tax liabilities, they would not, as under the Doughton bill, be called upon to add to the actual amount of their current tax payments. Payments above the first surtax bracket would be collected as at present, though these payments would be applied to the income of the preceding year.

The Robertson-Forand bill provides further for the imposition from July 1 of a 20 per cent withholding tax, above personal exemptions, on wages and salaries, and for quarterly payments of the basic 19 per cent current tax liability by other persons. This very adroit compromise measure would achieve two very important objectives. It would put on a current basis all taxpayers who have little surplus income and who depend on current earnings to meet their obligations. And it would assure collection of taxes from wage earners and salaried workers as income is received. ceived.

The serious flaw in the bill is its failure to apply the pay-as-you-go principle impartially. Not only does it discriminate against a minority group; it adds to the complications of a already bewilderingly complex income-tax system. While no individual would be compelled to pile new taxes atop of existing taxes as the price of getting on a current tax basis, a good many people would be compelled year after year to pay part of their taxes on a current basis and part on a deferred basis. Apart from considerations of political expediency, there is no justification for drawing an invidious distinction between those who pay surtaxes above the first bracket and those who do not.

Nevertheless, in spite of its failure to make a clean break with the past, the Robertson-Forand bill is a very acceptable substitute for the defeated Carlson bill. There is reason to hope that the Senate may yet turn the scales in favor of an outright pay-as-you-go plan that the House would be willing to accept. But, barring that possibility, the bill just passed by the House is well worthy of support.

Baltimore Election

A Republican, Mr. Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin, has been elected mayor of the normally strong Democratic City of Baltimore. His majority over the incumbent, Mayor Howard W. Jackson, was in the neighborhood of 20,000. and not since the great Harding landslide of 1920 has a Republican candidate carried that city by so wide a margin.

Mayor Jackson has been continuously in office since 1931 and had served an earlier term from 1923 to 1927. He is pretty well known throughout the country as one of the ablest of municipal administrators, especially in financial matters. Mr. McKeldin's political experience has consisted up to now of a series of unsuccessful candidacies and a term of service as secretary to a previous Republican Mayor of Baltimore. In view of all this, there may be a temptation to perceive in the Baltimore election another sign of a general and undiscriminating revolt everywhere against the long Democratic ascendancy.

Such an interpretation, however, would be specious. An examination of the Baltimore returns shows that all the Democratic candidates except Mayor Jackson were elected by very handsome majorities. It also shows that the voting was extremely light—that not much more than a third of the registered voters went to the polls. A large section of the population representing new residents engaged in the war industries, is, moreover, not even registered.

Thus it is evident that the result was determined mainly by the "machine" vote, Democratic and Republican. Mr. Jackson has earned the hostility of various factions in his own party. This hostility is of long standing and has been especially pronounced since 1934. In that year Mr. Jackson opposed the late Governor Ritchie in the Democratic primary. That primary campaign was attended by considerable bitterness and, justly or otherwise, Mr. Jackson was blamed for Ritchie's subsequent defeat in the general election.

It would seem then that Tuesday's election in Baltimore was decided by a complex of local factors, including the feeling among a good many citizens that three consecutive terms of office are quite enough for anybody. But, aside from this last aspect, it is difficult to see that result has any national significance one way or the other.

Nonsense On Prices

Some of the labor leaders who swung around to support the Government's stabilization efforts a few weeks ago seem to be wavering once more. Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., has called a meeting of his executive committee for May 14 to decide what attitude labor should take toward the anti-inflation movement. Unless prices can be rolled back to the level of September 15, 1942, he warned the Administration, labor will once more demand wage adjustments. The joint labor advisory committee of the OPA has gone a step further, calling for price cuts that would restore the cost of living to the level of last May 15.

It is axiomatic that if the anti-inflation line is to be held against wage increases, that line must also be held against price increases. But these spokesmen for labor ask the Government to make an impossible choice. An attempt to roll back prices to any level existing last year would be like trying to roll back the sea. These appeals seem to rest on an assumption, moreover, that wages have been stabilized as of last May or September. The fact is that both average hourly earnings and average weekly earnings have continued to advance in manufacturing industry as a whole. Average weekly earnings moved up from $35.82 in May to $37.80 in September, and to $41.12 in February. Would Mr. Murray be willing to have these earnings rolled back to the level of last spring or last fall?

The inescapable fact is that wages have advanced far more since the war began than has the cost of living. The great majority of workers are receiving wages that would permit them to raise their standard of living if the goods were available for purchase. Labor has nothing to gain by trying to push wage payments to still higher levels at a time when the increases go only to feed the fires of inflation. Its long-range interest is so clearly on the side of holding the line against inflation that the issue should not be obscured by loose talk of rolling prices back while wages continue to mount. The best that can be hoped for is a holding of the present line, even though it seems to give wage earners as a whole a substantial advantage.

Whose Red Cross?

Pending for months before the Senate Judiciary Committee has been a reform which has long been overdue. It is to be hoped that the committee will take early action on it, as the House already has. The reform is the prohibition of the use of the Red Cross emblem for any commercial purpose or by any organization except the Red Cross and the armed services. A letter in an adjoining column from Miss Julia Stimson, president of the Nurses Association, adds a cogent plea for action to the pleas which already have been made by President Roosevelt and the Secretaries of State, War and Navy, among other weighty authorities. A pledge to rid the country of this abuse is of long standing. As far back as 1929 the United States made such a pledge in a Geneva convention.

In peacetime, perhaps, there was not much reason to end this exploitation of the Red Cross emblem. In virtue of long use business concerns had acquired a sort of vested interest in the red cross as a trade-mark which did not seem to give rise to complications. In time of war, however, commercial exploitation of the emblem is likely to have serious consequences. As a representative of the Navy said, in urging prompt passage of the bill banning its private use, we must "be alert at all times to see that our own use of the identifying emblem gives enemy nations no cause, just or assumed, to disregard its inviolability." There is only one way in which complete and essential protection of the emblem can be assured. That is unqualifiedly to prohibit its use in marking or advertising any products offered for private sale and in promoting private causes. The wisdom of prompt action should need no argument.

America At War

By Selden Menefee

Rural Virginia

THE farmers of Culpeper County, Va., are feeling the farm manpower shortage as never before. But they are getting just as many acres planted this year as last. "We're just going to plant this crop and pray that we can save it," they say.

More than that, the farmers are cooperating with the Department of Agriculture's "Food for Freedom" program 100 per cent. They were asked to plant 100 acres of soybeans for oil this year, but instead they are planting 1000 acres. The farmers feel that a guaranteed price of $1.80 a bushel is enough insurance that they won't go bankrupt while doing their part for the war program.

Dairy farmers who supply milk to the Washington area have suffered least from the shortage of farm labor. They hire family men on a year-round basis, paying them $50 or more a month "and found." The smaller farms are hardest hit. Deferment of farm workers helped them, but it came too late to solve the problem.

Culpeper's workers have migrated to Norfolk, Baltimore and other war centers in large numbers. One group of men commutes to Quantico each day—a 100-mile round trip—to work on a Government war project.

Farm Hands Leaving

A FARM owner with a 375-acre cattle farm north of Culpeper has lost three out of his four farm hands, has been able to replace only one. Last to leave was a Negro tenant farmer with 11 children. He told his employer with genuine regret, "Boss, I've worked for you for I don't know how long and I hate to leave you, but I can make me $6.50 a day on that airport up Warrenton way, and they'll pick me up with a truck and carry me there and back. I know you can't pay me that much and I need that money, so I guess I'll have to take it."

Boys of school age are largely responsible for saving the crops so far in Culpeper County. They are excused from classes whenever they are needed on the farm, attending school irregularly on rainy days and in slack work periods.

School officials estimate that half of the boys—20 per cent of the entire high school population—are taking advantage of this arrangement. "Taking advantage" is the correct phrase, for although the boys are supposed to attend school on all examination days, many of them forget to do so, and the percentage of failures is rising.

The Culpeper schools have other problems, too. "The children react to the war like barometers," high school principal R. R. Tolbert told me. The boys, especially, can't keep their minds on their work. Those who are still around are enthusiastic about their aviation classes, but in English class they ask "What's the use of studying Shakespeare? It won't help us in the Army." Several seniors left school this year, after their eighteenth birthday, to join up.

Teacher turnover is another vexing problem. At the close of this school year one teacher plans to go to work for duPont; another will take a war job in Norfolk; two intend to enter Government service in Washington, and two expect to quit teaching and join their soldier husbands stationed in this country.

It will be difficult to replace these teachers. Salaries are low in rural Virginia, and the supply of teachers is even lower. Here, as elsewhere, married women who have retired from teaching will be drafted back into the schools.

Culpeper itself is a town of some 2500 people, serving as a market center for a rural population of 40,000 in the red-mud district of Culpeper, Madison and Rappahannock Counties. Like many another small farming town, it supports two weekly newspapers, one for and one against the Administration. (In some places even this distinction is disappearing; in Leesburg an editor told me that "one of our papers is for Senator Byrd; the other is for him, only not quite so much.")

Follow the News

THE people of Culpeper County—especially the parents of the 300 servicemen—follow the war news avidly. But there is some griping on the home front about gasoline rationing, and charges have been made that the local Selective Service Board has played favorites in bringing 38-year-old men back from the Army.

There are also some things about Washington that representative citizens of Culpeper don't like. These include (1) the Administration's slowness in adopting a farm manpower policy; (2) congressional quarreling with the Administration and slowness in dealing with such proposed legislation as the Ruml plan, and (3) squabbling in high Washington circles—specifically, they mentioned the Jeffers-Patterson feud and the fight over the size of the Army. "These fights," one Culpeper woman volunteered, "are disgraceful. They should be settled out of court."

On the other hand, Culpeper strongly supported the stand of the President in the coal strike. No one defends John L. Lewis down here; most people believe that strikes in war industries today are little short of treason.

Tunisia As Test

By Barnet Nover

How Good Is German Morale?

THE BRILLIANT victory won by American troops at Mateur points to an early conclusion of the six-month struggle for Tunisia. Rail communications between Bizerte and Tunis have now been cut; Bizerte is within range of Allied heavy artillery and the net is being drawn around Tunis.

In view of Allied air and naval supremacy in that theater, any large-scale evacuation of Axis forces from Tunisia is now definitely out of the question. The most that General von Arnim can hope for at this stage is to fight a prolonged delaying action, exchanging lives for time. And as the Allies drive closer and closer to the sea the ratio of lives sacrificed to time gained is certain to go up.

THIS BRINGS up an important question: Are the Germans temperamentally capable of fighting a last-ditch fight, one which every individual, from the commander in chief to the lowliest private, knows is utterly without hope?

Now, there can be no doubt that the Germans are brave soldiers and, what is more, obedient to orders. But there is no Thermopylae in German military tradition, no Alamo. It may, indeed, have been with the deliberate purpose of creating such a tradition that the German press and radio made such a fuss over the defeat at Stalingrad.

Already, at the time the German Sixth Army on the Volga faced certain doom, another Stalingrad was shaping up in North Africa and, peering into the unpleasant future, the Nazi higher-ups saw still other Stalingrads looming ahead.

At the same time they knew, from past history, that the Germans do not thrive on a diet of disaster, that they are not at their best as fighters when they are losing. And they saw the grim possibility that a few major defeats of the kind the German army suffered on the Eastern Front in the late fall and early winter of 1942 might have the effect on German morale of a pin being stuck into a balloon.

In other words, the dirges and requiems and basso profundo laments of Nazi propagandists over the fate of the German Sixth Army may very well have been intended not merely to gloss over Hitler's costly mistake, but also to provide other trapped German troops with an heroic example.

GREAT CONSEQUENCES are likely to flow from the elimination, in the near future, of the last Axis foothold on the southern shore of the Mediterranean.

The certainty of an Allied victory in Tunisia has stirred into motion a new wave of hope in occupied Europe, a new wave of fear in Axis lands.

Already, however, the Tunisian campaign has more than justified itself.

It has forced Hitler to divert to a theater of the Allies' choosing air power which he has been desperately hoarding against the day of invasion.

It has cost him heavily in shipping and materiel. Tunisia, moreover, has made possible the transformation of a green American Army into an Army of seasoned veterans. We need only contrast Kasserine Pass with Mateur to see that. And more than anything that has happened since the United Nations came into being it has brought into being an effective team spirit among diverse Allied forces.

THE TUNISIAN campaign may now provide us with the answer to the important question: How strong is German morale?

Already documents found on German prisoners suggest that the morale of the Axis forces in Tunisia is sagging, to say the least. There is, for instance, that order issued to battalion commanders to keep under surveillance "delinquents and men of weak spirit" in their units, to take brutal measures, if necessary, to prevent desertions and to warn their men that if they deserted, their families at home would be punished.

"The old Africans," that is Rommel's men, says a notation in a German artillery corporal's diary, "are fed up to the teeth." And the writer denounced the cynical rear service troops as swine who insisted on calling Tunis "Tunisgrad."

ALL THIS should not be exaggerated. In the fighting of the past two weeks the German troops, according to correspondents at the front, fought with fanatic fierceness. They may continue to do so. The Stalingrad epic developed by the minions of Dr. Goebbels may have done its work. And before Stalingrad there were those 10 years of indoctrination in the master race theory to which the youth of Germany were incessantly subjected.

Yet there is the possibility that older German traits, particularly the traditional unwillingness to continue fighting a war already lost, will prove stronger than latter-day Nazi propaganda.

In this respect Tunisia, and particularly the fighting of the next two or three weeks, will provide an acid test. The morale of Hitler's garrison in Fortress Europe is about to be weighed in the balance—in Tunisia.

Abuse Of Red Cross Emblem

When it was learned that the Japanese government did not intend to be bound by the provisions of one of the Geneva Conventions and had executed some of the American fliers, there was widespread righteous indignation and horror throughout this country, but what about the action of our own Congress in refusing to make effective the provisions of the Geneva Treaty of 1929, intended to reserve to the Army and Navy and to the American Red Cross the exclusive use in this country of the Red Cross name and emblem?

This treaty is clear in its terms and provides for the passage of legislation to prevent the use of the emblem for commercial purposes within five years after the treaty is ratified. The President recommended the passage of such necessary legislation on April 3, 1942. A bill was promptly introduced in the Senate, but has been allowed to lie in the subcommittee considering it, without any report.

The surgeon generals of the Army and Navy certified to Congress the urgent need of the legislation for the protection of the armed forces. The American Association of Nurses at its last convention unanimously approved of the proposed statute. The Secretary of War has recently written to the chairman of the Senate committee that "the passing of months of the present war without the enactment of this legislation is a matter of concern to us." The Secretary of the Navy also wrote, "I do at this time desire . . . to emphasize that the urgent need of this legislation has increased with each day's experience gained in this war."

The opposition to the bill, as I am informed, comes from certain commercial firms who have used the emblem for business purposes, and who so far have been able to persuade Congress that this Geneva Treaty is a "mere scrap of paper," and that although the other 62 signers of the treaty have made the treaty operative by decree, or have passed the implementing legislation, we need not do so.

It has been urged by the opponents that the treaty says that the signing governments, such as ours, will recommend to their legislatures such legislation as may be necessary to accomplish the purposes of the treaty, and that therefore after such recommendation has been made, there is no further obligation on the part of our Government. Secretary Hull, only a few days ago, in urging the passage of the legislation, demonstrates that this would not be acting in good faith, and says: ". . . we undertake an obligation which is not discharged merely by a recommendation to the Congress."

Another technical objection to our country carrying out its sacred treaty undertaking is that some of these commercial users claim to have used the emblem for advertising purposes prior to the date of the first incorporation of an American Red Cross Society. Even if this were so, it would not relieve this Government from carrying out its 1929 treaty obligation. The truth, however, is that the Red Cross emblem was first used by a society, of which the present American Red Cross is a successor, as early as 1864, immediately after the adoption of the first Geneva Treaty and more than 15 years before any commercial user attempted to take advantage of the world-wide significance of this emblem of mercy for his own purposes.

To recapitulate, the Army, Navy, State, and Justice Departments and the nurses' association are in full accord with the President that the carrying out of this solemn treaty commitment is needed now on behalf of the armed forces and those who work with them. It is appreciated that the Congress is very busy at this time, but this treaty, both as a matter of honor and in the furtherance of the war effort, would seem to be well deserving of their prompt and sympathetic consideration.

JULIA STIMSON,
President, American Association of Nurses."

Coal Strike

This coal strike is a national disgrace. It is the best news that Hitler has heard since the attack on Pearl Harbor. Mr. Lewis, you don't care about the miners and their low wages. They will always be poor because your union and the company stores get all their money. I know because I worked among them as a nurse for years. Their work is the hardest and most dangerous of any class, but they can never get ahead as long as they have you, your relatives and your pals bossing them.

Your conduct in this strike is not to benefit the miners, but to show our President how much you hate him and try to belittle him.

We parents of servicemen are getting pretty angry, Mr. Lewis, and won't take much more of your defiance of the law.

John L. Lewis

"Now listen," said Paul Revere to his friend, Dawes, "if the British march by land or sea from the town tonight, I want you to hang a lantern aloft in the belfry arch and give me the signal. One if by land and two if by sea . . ."

"What about John Lewis?" asked Dawes. "Has he agreed to all this?"

"It is not necessary to get the consent of John Lewis."

"I hope you're right," said Dawes.

Paul continued:

"And I on the opposite shore will be,
Ready to ride and spread the alarm
Through every Middlesex village and farm,
For the country folk to be up and to arm."

"But won't there be trouble about that?" asked Dawes.

"Who'll make trouble?" demanded Revere.

"Somebody's apt to," insisted Dawes. "Are you sure you've got your card in the Alarm Spreaders local?"

"Everything's all set. Nobody would stop me in a national emergency," snapped Paul.

"Sez you!" remarked Dawes skeptically.

"Then he said 'Good night' and with muffled oar
Silently rowed to the Charlestown shore
Just as the moon rose over the bay,
Where, swinging wide at her moorings, lay
The Somerset, British man-o'-war."

(Note: Paul had a little trouble, due to a last-minute charge that he was breaking the Rowboat Oarsmen's agreement of the previous October, but managed to get out of it some way.)

"Paul gazed at the landscape far and near,
Then, impetuous, stamped the earth,
And turned and tightened his saddle-girth;
But mostly he watched with eager search
The belfry-tower of the Old North Church."

(Note: There was no lantern signal. Mr. Lewis had prevented this on the ground that all understanding with lantern carriers had run out and that anybody carrying one in a belfry would be trespassing. Revere waited and then exclaimed, "The devil with signals. I'll ride anyway.")

"It was 12 by the village clock
When he crossed the bridge into Medford town;"
It was two days later at half-past 1
When he galloped into Lexington.

(Note: All Paul knew was that an order signed "John L." issued from a comfortable hotel far behind the lines had thrown picket lines across most of the roads and rejected all arbitration propositions.)

It was six weeks later at 2 o'clock
When he came to the bridge at Concord town.

(Note: Well, it seems Mr. Lewis, acting for the Saddlers, Horseshoers, Riding Boot Makers and Oat Handlers Unions, had issued orders delaying Paul all along the line. By this time he had called a general strike of Alarm Spreaders, too. "I'll show that 'Shape in the Moonlight a Bulk in the Dark' who's boss in this country," Mr. Lewis thundered.)

It was four months later, with hundreds dead,
When Paul got permission to go ahead.

"Positively no cries of defiance, no voices in the darkness and not a knock at a door without my authorization," Mr. Lewis decreed at this point, as Paul, who was getting pretty sick of the whole thing, climbed onto his horse, now stiff from standing around so much.

"But this is war," argued Paul once more. "Our country is in dire danger."

"Nobody loves this country more than I do," said Mr. Lewis, shooting the horse and branding Paul Revere as a narrow, capitalistic tool of politicians.

Fool's Paradise

We have been hearing about dangers of inflation repeatedly during the last few years, and at the same time doing everything to invite inflation.

Roger Babson deflates the high-wage dream: "You warworkers are now living in a fool's paradise. . . . You munition workers are today just where your employers were in 1929. You are headed for just as much of a licking as they got. Your labor leaders are blinding you to the real facts, the same as Wall Street bankers blinded your employers 14 years ago."
ers 14 years ago."

By bequeathing the postwar period a heritage of high wages, increased taxes and inflated values, we let ourselves in for quite a burden of grief, and nip in the bud the pleasing prospect offered by the usual blueprint of the future.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Frozen Minds And Frozen Prices

WE ARE now at the reckoning for a most costly popular illusion: the notion that inflation can be prevented and a peace economy converted to a war economy by passing laws and issuing decrees that all prices and all wages are frozen as of some particular date. This doctrine, which is absolutely false and therefore entirely unworkable, has resulted in the freezing not of prices and wages but of our capacity for constructive action. It has prevented the development of practical measures for stabilizing the cost of living. It has raised unnecessary but insoluble issues between the farmers and the rest of the community, between the wage-earners and the rest of the community, and between farmers and wage-earners.

LIPPMANN

Late in the day though it is, we cannot hope to go forward, and we must inevitably fall into even greater difficulty, unless the leaders of American public opinion are willing to reconsider and revise the fashionable but unnecessary theory upon which Government policy and most public comment are currently based.

THE fallacy of the universal freeze becomes quickly apparent when we realize that it is a proposal to operate the most complex capitalistic economy in the world by removing the central mechanism of prices which regulates production and consumption. This is like removing the steering gear from an automobile. If the car is to be left standing in the garage, the absence of the steering gear will not be felt. It would be possible also, no doubt, for enough men to move the car around a little by pushing on one side of the car and then on the other. Or it might be possible to fasten the front wheels so that the car would move in a straight line. But without a steering gear, the car could not be driven rapidly on a winding road.

NOW, when you make a decree that all prices and wages are frozen as of a certain date, the best you could conceivably hope for is to get exactly the same economic results that you were getting on that particular date. Everybody ought to go on working where he is, making what he was making, consuming what he was consuming on the day of the freeze.

But this is precisely what in wartime you do not want. You want millions of men to leave their jobs and go into the armed forces. You want millions of others to go into war industries. You want different goods manufactured, crops in different quantities grown. But under the theory of the universal freeze you cannot pay more for the new things you want than you paid for the old things you no longer want. You have suspended the inducements and the controls by which your capitalistic economy regulates alterations of supply and demand. But then you must not be astonished and pained if, having abolished the steering wheel, you cannot drive the economy effectively by the fist of officials and the rhetoric of press agents.

THE heart of our current confusion is our failure to see that we have two grand but distinct objectives: one is to promote production of the right commodities in the right quantities; the other is to distribute goods at retail in fair rations at stable prices. The universal freeze cannot achieve both objectives. To get production we have to provide the incentives of wages and profits. To stabilize the cost of living we have to insulate retail prices against the effect of these incentives. The uneconomic theory of the general freeze seeks to achieve these separate and contradictory objectives by the same device.

That is impossible. If we pay producers, — the manufacturers, distributers, farmers, and wage workers—their costs and an effective profit, we puncture the retail ceilings. If we hold the ceilings, we are in trouble with the producers, and we get inadequate production, black markets, and an unending series of nasty disputes with the farm bloc and with organized labor.

IN THE present coal dispute, which may determine industrial relations in many other vital industries, there is no hope of a lasting solution unless we take direct frontal measures to stabilize the cost of living. Mr. Ickes and Mr. Lewis and the War Labor Board cannot settle the real problem because they are concerned with the production of coal. What we have to regulate is the retail price of food, and only as, when, and if we succeed in regulating the retail price of food, can we expect to keep wages level, to keep men working willingly and effectively. The central figure in the problem, therefore, is Mr. Brown of the OPA, and it is upon the policy which he forms and the program which he adopts that the whole business hangs.

But Mr. Brown does not seem to have a policy and a program, and the reason seems to be that he is one of the chief victims of the collective delusion that the universal freeze is the universal panacea. Instead of fixing his attention on specific practical measures to keep retail prices level, he is driven by the delusion to think he can do this by freezing an altogether different set of prices—namely those paid to producers as an incentive to produce. Yet he will never have a program until he recognizes the elementary economic truth that under the special conditions of war, retail prices and producers' prices have to be separated, have to be treated differently, have to be insulated the one from the other. That is what war price control means, and the failure to grasp this distinction is the root of the whole trouble.

17 Saved By Tiny Hut

By the Associated Press

An Advance Allied Base in the Andreanof Islands, April 19 (Delayed).—Seventeen American fighting men were marooned in a tiny one-man trapper's hut in a fashion to dismay the old woman who lived in a shoe, following an Aleutian blizzard which wrecked a Catalina flying boat, smashed a whale boat which came to look for survivors, and finally drove in an Army scouting party to share the battered shelter.

The long-delayed report of the incident, which ocurred last June, followed a crash landing of a plane piloted by Lieut. Lowell H. Williamson of Decatur, Ill., a veteran of Bataan, and a crew of six.

Williamson's plane taxied 5 miles in from a sea landing as his crew bailed a sea-smashed bottom faster than the cold Bering waters could leak in.

In terrifically bad weather, which had caused Capt. Leslie E. Gehres of Seattle, commander of the Alaska Fleet air wing, to order all patrol planes back to base, 20-foot ocean swells tore the rivets out of Williamson's pontoons as he came down in a forced landing out of sight of land.

Rescuers Wrecked

Ensign Robert W. Hall of Los Angeles commanded a crew of six men in a whaleboat from a seaplane tender which was part of the rescue force sent out to look for the missing plane.

His tiny craft was smashed on rocks in a 110-mile gale as he sighted the wrecked plane in a cove. All the men reached shore.

Williamson said he headed his plane for a fjord after it came down.

"The wind was whipping up around 35 knots," he related.

Hoping to bounce the plane off into the air on the wave swells and reach the home base only 10 minutes away by air, he was just gaining speed when Radioman A. V. Clark of Charksville, Tex., reported:

"Our rivets are popping out, sir. Our bottom is dropping out. The boys can't keep up with the water. We seem to be sinking, sir."

It was then that Williamson sought the shelter of a cove where the stranded crew found the trapper's cabin.

The door was broken down, there were holes in the sod walls and grass was growing on the floor, "but some of us would have frozen to death without it," Williamson said.

Barely Reached Safety

Lieut. (J. G.) Howard F. Pearson, San Diego, Calif., said the entrance through which the big flying boat made the shore "was just wide enough for our wings, and with a 35-knot wind and rocks and breakers, only a perfect job saved our skins."

When cold and snow threatened to cripple the party in their shore shelter, Max Armstrong, Streator, Ill., and Gene K. Holleman, McAlester, Okla., improvised a stove from the toilet of the plane and two parachute flare tins for a chimney.

Parachutes were spread on the floor, but the cold gave the whole party little sleep. The 4 by 10 foot quarters were completely jammed as four Army scouts, also on the lookout for the missing plane struggled in out of a 50-mile wind after a climb over a mountain pass.

As morning came the party of 17 ate compressed ham, chocolate and hardtack and set out through a 2-foot snow over rough country for the base.

Thirteen of the men became snow-blind and dazed. They were found wandering in circles by Walter M. Kamsack, an old-time Alaska guide sent out to look for the party, and set on their trail for home.

Within a week, with the help of a second patrol plane with spare parts, the PBY was repaired and flown home.

Planes, Jeeps, Army Vehicles Sent By Thousands To Russia

The United States has sent Russia "several thousand planes," "many tens of thousands" of trucks, jeeps and other military vehicles and over one million tons of foodstuffs.

This was disclosed yesterday by Lend-Lease Administrator Edward R. Stettinius, jr., in his most detailed report on the extent of this country's assistance to Russia. Altogether, shipments up to April 1 aggregated 3,500,000 long tons, he said, and were valued at $1,825,477,000. A long ton is 2240 pounds.

In the first three months of 1943 shipments were 35 per cent greater than in the preceding quarter and more than twice the total shipped in the corresponding period of 1942.

The overwhelming majority of lend-lease shipments have reached Russia, Stettinius said, adding that losses were suffered principally on the North Russia route, and a large proportion of the supplies are moving by the Persian Gulf route.

The lend-lease administrator reported that among other items sent to Russia were:

Thousands of tons of steel and armor plate, copper, brass, aluminum, zinc, TNT, toluol and other chemicals, large quantities of railroad rail, signal and other communications equipment, and smaller quantities of electric furnaces, presses, forging hammers, and other machine tools.

Along with aircraft and motor vehicles, food shipments now hold the top priority, Stettinius said. Most lend-lease shipments of dehydrated vegetables are going to Russia along with wheat flour, sugar, canned meats, dried peas and beans, lard and vegetable oils. So that the Russians may produce food in newly-developed agricultural areas, this country also has shipped 8000 tons of seeds.

Divided as to value, shipments include:

Ordnance, $280,891,000; aircraft, $328,975,000; tanks, $179,820,000; motor vehicles, $220,822,000; water craft, $27,888,000; industrial products, $461,348,000, and agricultural products, $316,733,000.

Stettinius reported that lend-lease shipments to all countries totaled $7,104,731,000 since the beginning of lend-lease. In addition, planes ferried by air and lend-lease ships sailed away under their own power had a value of 675 million dollars.

Total lend-lease aid amounts to $10,319,518,000. This includes services, such as ship repairs, in addition to actual shipments.

In addition to aid to Russia, Stettinius reported these exports for the full lend-lease period:

United Kingdom, $3,118,835,000; Africa and Middle East, $1,039,763,000; China, India, Australia and New Zealand, $891,725,000; all other, $$230,931,000.

We Don't Like Lewis

(From the Portland Oregonian)

We do not like John L. Lewis because we attribute to him, more than to any other person or persons, the split in labor that has prompted the jurisdictional strike.

We do not like John L. Lewis because he shifts from political party to political party for obscure reasons.

We do not like John L. Lewis because he thought he had moved the Administration to his own vest pocket by making available to a Democratic campaign $470,000 of labor union dues.

We do not like John L. Lewis because in 1940 he openly charged that the President of the United States was deliberately trying to embroil his country in a foreign war.

We do not like John Lewis for the delusions of grandeur he exhibited in assaying the last presidential election as a marginal contest between Mr. Roosevelt and himself, to be followed by his own renunciation of his labor union office if he lost.

We do not like John L. Lewis for his hypocrisy in instigating a strike in wartime in the bituminous coal fields and trying to justify it with a fatuous definition of "trespass."

We do not like John L. Lewis because he is violating, for captious reasons, the pledge which, with other labor leaders, he made that there would be no strikes in war industries during the war.

We do not like John L. Lewis for his rejection of the good offices of established tribunals created by his Government to adjust labor difficulties in wartime.

We do not like John L. Lewis for his indifference to the effect his miners' demands, if fully granted, would have upon the "hold the line" policies of the national Administration on wages and price ceilings.

We do not like John L. Lewis for his insistence on more than the correction of gross inequities in miners' wages that are obtainable by orderly procedure.

We do not like John L. Lewis because he is stubborn, opinionated, selfish, carping and fickle, and indifferent to the national consequences of his yielding to these traits.

We would not here detail the reasons for our dislike of John L. Lewis did we not believe that millions of reflective, patriotic citizens, while they wish that the proper agency shall correct any wage injustices in the mine fields that may exist in fact, also indulge with us a dislike of John L. Lewis.

May the Administration have the courage to meet any challenge of its authority, any challenge of its ability successfully to prosecute the war, that comes from John L. Lewis. May it dispense justice where justice is due to the rank and file, and set John L. Lewis down so hard that he shall not rise again to imperil the country from within while it is imperiled from without.

War Centers Report

By the Associated Press

Assailing official red tape, a congressional committee called yesterday for "direct action" to alleviate congestion and overcrowding in war production centers and embarkation areas.

The House Naval Affairs Subcommittee based its report on an investigation of conditions in San Diego, Calif., but also has studied the situation in Hampton Roads, Va., and San Francisco.

The War Production Board was charged in the report with being the "chief offender" in blocking an orderly and efficient solution of San Diego's problems.

Great Delays Cited

Because of the necesity of obtainin approval of minor officials for specific community projects, great delays on very important undertakings usually resulted, the report said, adding:

"On innumerable occasions requests, both public and private for priorities of various kinds have been lost. Other applications have remained unacted upon for months and even for more than a year. The aparent policy of having each official of a dozen or more bureaus "leisurely satisfy himself as to the correctness of the application before the head man gives a decision granting a priority rating may be the orthodox method of conducting a peacetime business enteprise, but it will never win a war. Direct action is needed, and that alone will produce the results essential to victory."

For San Diego the subcommittee recommended appointment of "an overall director or expediter" clothed by the President with authority to act.

Curfew Recommended

The report also recommended inauguration of a curfew requiring juveniles under 16 to be off the streets by 10 p m. and formation of labor-management committees in all war plants as a means of increasing production which, it said, is being threatened because of conditions existing in the city.

The subcommittee, headed by Representative Izac (Democrat) of California plans to conduct similar surveys in Portland, Me., and Newport, R. I.

San Diego officials, headed by City Manager Walter Cooper, have done an "outstanding job of trying to help themselves" without waiting to be aided by the Government, the report stated.

Local officials, it declared, were more conversant with local problems and were best fitted to advise in their correction.

"And still," it continued, "certain Government agencies, depending on a quick look by a traveling 'expert,' or even no look at all, insist on the re-engineering of projects and changes of plans, changes in materials, changes of all kinds too numerous to mention."

Labor turnover, resulting largely from lack of adequate housing, reached nearly 100 per cent in industry and was even greater in construction trades, the report stated.

Mosquito, World's Fastest Bomber, Stings Nazis Often

By the Associated Press

London, (Thursday), May 6.—The Mosquito bombers which have been stinging the Nazis repeatedly and seldom getting swatted out of the air are able to do this because they are the world's fastest bombers, it was stressed today.

In connection with the first visit of the press to one of the many assembly plants where this plywood two-engine monoplane is being put together it also was revealed that as a bomber it can carry a ton of explosives to any point in Germany.

As a fighter the Mosquito packs four 20-mm cannon and four .30-caliber machineguns, all grouped in the nose to give terrific concentration of fire-power.

This is the first entirely new operational aircraft designed since the war began and in mass production now after having set a record of only 22 months from the drawing board to battle.

The exact speed was not disclosed, but it is safe to guess the Mosquito can move 400 MPH, since it is known to have flown nonstop from Britain to Russia in the morning and returned in the afternoon and to have made the run from Britain to Malta as an afternoon jaunt.

Its makers, the De Havilland Company, think the manufacture is probably more dispersed than any other plane, with scores of widely scattered assembly depots and about 400 sub-contractors, including many furniture and woodwokring plants, making components of the Mosquito.

Censor Rebukes Mrs. Roosevelt, Too

Edmanton, Alta., May 5 (Canadian Press).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is rebuked by the censor just like anyone else, she wrote an Edmonton newspaper reporter.

The reporter wrote the President's wife after finding her daily newspaper column was marked "examined by censor." He thought she might be interested to know it.

"The censor does watch my column," she replied, "because several times I have spoken of the weather, without thinking, and have been rebuked just like anyone else."

Desires Ouster Of Minorities

By the Associated Press

(Prime Minister Jovanovitch of Yugoslavia, in the third of a series of articles outling the attitude of other countries toward postwar planning, says his country will cooperate in a Balkan bloc, but desires removal of minorities (Yugoslavia was organized after World War I from a group of small national blocs) and seeks territorial gains. He writes of an area which is the very embodiment of many of the problems which will beset those who seek a long-term settlement.)

By Slobodan Jovanovitch
Prime Minister of Yugoslavia

London, May 5 (AP).—The question of reestablishment of peaceable civil government in my country does not arise because the principle of legality has been safeguarded by the fact that the King is in London and is accompanied by his government, which continued to function after the collapse of Yugoslavia.

From the point of view of international and constitutional law, the question of a change of government after its return home—always bearing in mind the feelings of the people—would raise no difficulties because the King is the undeniable symbol of legitimacy.

All the principal political groups in Yugoslavia are represented in the present government in London. General Mihailovitch, Serbian guerilla leader on the spot, also is its war minister. Dr. Matchek, an Axis prisoner and acknowledged leader of the Croat people, as well as the Slovene leaders each have their representatives in the legal government.

Specific Plan Not Now Possible

It clearly is not possible at the present stage, before the war is won and from abroad, to lay down a hard and fast plan in advance concerning constitutional government and the administrative machinery.

As regards the work of relief and rehabilitation during the transition period which immediately follows the cessation of hostilities, that is not a matter which is the concern of Yugoslav government alone, but one which comes within the relief plans being worked out in London and Washington by the United Nations in regard to all the peoples of territories at present occupied by the enemy.

Restoration of Yugoslavia's national boundaries must necessarily be based on the principles of the Atlantic Charter.

Those principles, as applied to the case of Yugoslavia, mean that in any case she must have restored to her all territories which were taken from her by the Axis powers and the satellites during the war, and also those territories which although ethnologically Yugoslav were given to Italy and Austria after the last European war.

The question of protection of minorities does not give rise to difficulties. Already some national minorities have started to leave Yugoslav territories and I believe after the war arrangements will have to be made for the transfer of those minorities which were fifth columnists during the war.

Difficult Question

(Since pre-war Yugoslavia combined several races, with the Serbs the dominant element, the question of minorities was a difficult one during the two decades between the two world wars, with Croats and Slovenes contesting for power with the Serbs. Other minorities were the Bosnians, the Montenegrins, the Slavonians.

(Just which minorities Jovanovitch would transfer as fifth columnist is not clear. He might refer to the Italian element in the northwest, a Bulgarian infiltration in the southeast or even a section of the Croats which has accepted Axis domination to a considerable extent.)

I consider Mr. Winston Churchill's words concerning close collaboration among groups of the smaller nations most opportune.

By an agreement between the kingdom of Yugoslavia and the kingdom of Greece concerning the formation of a Balkan union, signed in London January 14, 1942, Yugoslavia gave the clearest possible indication of her concern for such collaboration.

U. S. Acted Early to Block Nazi Influence in Nation, OWI Says

The Office of War Information charged last night that Germany started the "invasion of certain strategic United States industries long before the Nazis came to power and when "the ink was scarcely dry on the treaty of Versailles." But, the agency stated, "vigorous measures taken by the United States have removed enemy influence from strategic sectors of our business life."

"Tangible assets or patents whose enemy-ownership has been concealed are discovered from day to day and the property rights promptly vested (seized)."

So far, the OWI said, 41,077 patents and pending applications owned by enemy nations and nationals of enemy-occupied countries, covering inventions in every field of applied science, have been seized and are under control of the alien property custodian.

"Money, ships, critical materials and machinery for war production have been taken from the Axis and are being used to hasten the day of the United Nations' victory," the OWI stated.

"When the Nazi party came into power and speeded up the production of war materiel at home, it deliberately utilized financial and industrial weapons in the penetration of the United States and other nations of this hemisphere," the statement continued.

Before the First World War, German ownership of companies in this country was not concealed, but, the OWI pointed out:

"Having learned from the experiences of 1917 that this policy made seizure of their holdings a simple matter, the imperialist German politicians took steps to guard against such seizures in the global war they knew was to come. And so, American or neutral 'fronts' were widely used to conceal true ownership."

Summarizing information supplied by the office of the alien property custodian and the Treasury Department, the OWI said:

"More than seven billion dollars of assets of enemy and enemy-occupied nations are now under freezing control or under control of the alien property custodian.

"Every company in which Nazi influence was known to exist has now been Americanized, according to the custodian (Leo T. Crowley)."

The agency related that enemy interest in 285 business enterprises has been taken over by the custodian; more than 2000 business firms are now operating under licenses from the Treasury Department and 29 alien-owned ships have been seized and are carrying supplies to the Allied fighting fronts.

"The ultimate disposition of the patents vested (seized) from nations of enemy-occupied countries is being made the subject of discussion between the Government of the United States and the governments of the invaded countries."

The OWI explained the custodian's policy in the case of enemy patents and patent applications already licensed as follows:

The Government grants only nonexclusive licenses, charges only a $50 license fee and no royalties.

An American firm which had exclusive rights to a patent at the time it was seized may continue to have those rights—providing they do not interfere with the war effort—with the royalties paid to the United States Government.

Retailers Urge Simplifying of Federal Orders

By the Associated Press

New York, May 5.—Continuing study and simplification of orders from Washington governing the retail trade were urged today by spokesmen for the merchandising division and bureau of smaller stores of the National Retail Dry Goods Association at a conference today.

J. D. Runkle, general manager of a department store in Detroit, said that deliveries from manufacturers would be uncertain in future months and that some stores were being forced to overbuy in order to have enough goods on hand for the fall and winter season.

Runkle urged that both WPB and OPA indicate how various orders from these Washington bureaus would be enforced. He said that only 10 per cent of the Nation's merchants understand WPB's "inventory control" order, and that few could fully comprehend OPA's price regulations.

Lew Hahn, general manager of the N. R. D. G. A., asked for a review of all existing Government orders on merchandising, urging that those which were unenforceable be dropped.

Eaton V. W. Read, chief of the consumer goods branch of the wholesale and retail trade division of WPB, said that his department was studying various proposed amendments to the inventory control order, L-219, and hoped to make such changes as were possible under the Government's plan for an equitable distribution of consumer goods.

Court Approves Reorganization Plan of Gen. Gas

New York, May 5 (AP).—Expressing the expectation that reorganization of the Associated Gas & Electric utilities system will be completed this year, Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell today authorized submission to the Securities and Exchange Commission of a new plan of reorganization for General Gas & Electric Corporation, a subsidiary of Associated Gas & Electric Corporation.

The new plan, superseding a plan filed on March 5, 1941, calls for the divestment of assets of General, simplification of its corporate structure and a more equitable distribution of voting power.

The new plan also proposes to give certain common stocks of subsidiaries of General to the public holders of cumulative preferred stocks and Class A and Class B common stocks in place of their present holdings.

"This is a real constructive document," Judge Leibell said, referring to the plan, "and will help immensely toward conclusion of the reorganization of Associated Gas & Electric Corporation and Associated Gas & Electric Co., which I expect will be completed during the year of 1943."

Blaw-Knox Bonds Called

New York, May 5 (AP).—Blaw-Knox Co., manufacturers of steel specialty products, today called for redemption all of its outstanding first mortgage 3½ per cent bonds due in 1950 amounting to $2,344,000. The bonds will be paid off at face value, plus interest to June 5 and a premium of 1½ per cent of the principal.

Askmenow Drives to Victory in Pimlico Oaks

Carrasquel Holds A's, Nats Slug to Win, 8 to 1

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Philadelphia, May 5.—Any time the American League can make the livelier ball available, it will be all right with Oscar Bluege, who manages the Nats, and the sooner the better, he says.

When Bluege was told that the league might be ready to junk the present balata ball by the end of this week and provide a ball with more bounce, he said, "That's great. I want to stand up and cheer."

POVICH

Bluege's enthusiasm for a livelier ball is purely selfish, he makes clear. "We've been doing all right with this ball, but we figure to do better with a ball that will travel farther. It suits our kind of a ball club," he said.

Bluege is thinking in terms of the speed of his team. "Any chance we have to run is in our favor," he pointed out. "When we were putting this team together, we counted on fellows like George Case, Mickey Vernon, Ellis Clary and Johnny Sullivan to go well on the bases. We're in a better position to run the bases than any club in the league, but you can't run if you can't get on, and this pumpkin they're hitting at now is keeping them off the bases."

The same advantages of the livelier ball won't accrue to every team, says Bluege, who thinks his Nats are peculiarly equipped to combat longer hits as well as make them. "We've got three good fielders in Stan Spence, George Case and Bob Johnson, who can drag long hits down. Every other club is suffering in the outfield."

Dutch Leonard can claim some kind of a pitching record, it has been learned. He has pitched a no-hit game against the Yankees, marred only by a six-month intermission in the eighth inning.

"Actually I held the Yankees hitless for a stretch of 11 consecutive innings," relates Leonard. "Last September they didn't get a hit off me in the last 7 2-3 innings I pitched against them, and the other day I held 'em hitless for 3 1-3 innings in my first start against 'em, since. I guess, though, I don't get credit for a no-hitter."

When the Yankees came to Griffith Stadium last September, Leonard was recovering from the broken leg that had kept him out of action for five months. "Before the game, they all came by and asked me how my leg felt. I told 'em it was O. K., and those Yankees said they were glad to hear it," said Leonard. "They said they wouldn't bunt against me. That was before the game. When the game started, the first seven Yanks I faced bunted me."

At that, the Yankees were a smarter crew than the Cleveland Indians, who were in town a week before, when Leonard made his first start since recovering from his leg fracture. "Those Yankees bunted down the third base line and gave me a lot of trouble. Cleveland tried to bunt me down the first base line, the dopes. They should have known that was my strong side."

Rogers Hornsby tells a story of his turbulent days as manager of the Browns when he was finally driven to levying stiff fines against his athletes who didn't observe all the rules of training.

"I was missing two of my ball players on the streamliner from St. Louis to the East one night," relates Hornsby. "I knew they were on the train, but their berths were empty. I started out on a hunt. I walked the length of the train and finally found 'em.

"There they were, sleeping up behind the locomotive, drunk as they could be. That didn't surprise me in the case of one of 'em. He was an old offender. But the other was a rookie. I shook 'em both out of their stupors.

"'This is costing you $200,' I told the old offender, and then I told the rookie I was fining him $100. Then I got a laugh. The old offender sat there scratching his head and looking at the rookie. 'Jeez!' he said, 'when I went to sleep I didn't think I was twice as drunk as you.'"

The lovable character of 80-year-old Connie Mack, who never wants his ball players to think ill of him, was displayed when the Nats met the Athletics for the first time this season.

With the Nats was Bob Johnson, who Mack had traded to the Washington club over the winter following a long salary wrangle. Johnson had been bitter at what he called Mr. Mack's stinginess, and made accusations that reached print.

But when Johnson appeared in a Washington uniform against the A's, one of his first acts was to walk across the field and shake hands with Mr. Mack.

"Wasn't that nice of Bob?" said the gentle Mr. Mack later. "He really didn't have to do that. I know he's always liked me."

Askmenow Cops $10,000 Pimlico Oaks

Wins by Length In 20th Running; Two Timely 2d, Pomrose Third

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, May 5.—With Jockey Carroll Bierman riding a smart race, Hal Price Headley's Askmenow, queen of the 2-year-old fillies last year, drove to victory in the twentieth running of the $10,000 Pimlico Oaks. The daughter of Menow and Conclave, whose last Maryland appearance was her winning effort in the Selima Stakes at Laurel, finished a length in advance of the King Ranch's Too Timely and two additional lengths in advance of George D. Widener's Pomrose.

A banner crowd of 12,000 tossed $737,318 into the day's action and saw Askmenow operate the mile and a sixteenth over a fast track in 1:45 4-5. Bracketed with Who Me as the Headley entry, Askmenow earned $10,225 for her owner and brought faithful backers a $6.60 mutuel. A field of 11 competed.

Had Some Trouble

While Too Timely and Pomrose, the pair that chased her to the wire, had some trouble in the running, Askmenow was always in the clear and Bierman engineered her move at the right time. Both Too Timely and Pomrose were away poorly. Gloriana forged to the front leaving the gate, followed by Royal Flush with Askmenow, carefully rated in third position.

On the backstretch, Gloriana quit and Royal Flush took command. However, Bierman bided his time and awaited the stretch to bid with the 1942 champion. Approaching the straightaway, Askmenow moved up on the outside of the pacemaker while Too Timely came through on the rail. In the meanwhile, Pomrose had improved her position.

In the stretch, Bierman increased the cadence of his riding and Askmenow disposed of Royal Flush. He kept the filly to a strong hand ride and it was well that he did for Too Timely and Pomrose closed gamely.

The Walbrook Handicap, the day's secondary feature, proved a thriller and saw Mrs. Ray Feinberg's Firebroom get up for a neck decision over Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Trelawny. Six lengths behind the fight for first money came Hal Price Headley's Equinox to be third.

Firebroom Sets Pace

Firebroom set the pace, but was overtaken by Trelawny in midstretch. Danny Scocca, riding Firebroom, refused to give up and he forced the 4-year-old to rally and won going away. Abbe Pierre failed to show speed as the favorite in the field of six going a mile and 70 yards. The winner paid $6.20 and registered time of 1:43 only four-fifths over the track record shared by Shuffle Along and Tred Avon.

The Bomar Stable showed a fast closing filly named Love Pact in the fourth race. Making her first start, the juvenile miss put on a stretch drive that nipped Mrs. A. J. Abel's Gramps Image right at the wire and brought a few scattered backers an $86.40 mutuel. Gramps Image, three times second in four starts, was a neck in advance of C. J. Raffo's Cee Raf. The winner was capably handled by Jockey Johnny Boyle and was clocked in 0:55 1/5 for the 4½ furlongs.

Al Schacht, Baseball's Clown Prince, Will Perform at Game

Famous Funny Man To Entertain Fans At War Bond Game

Al Schacht, quick to answer an invitation by The Washington Post, yesterday announced his willingness to bring his clown act to Griffith Stadium on the night of May 24 when it will be programmed as part of the War Bond Baseball Show.

Schacht, most famous of baseball funny men, will entertain the fans before the start of the game between the Nats and the sensational Norfolk Naval Training Station team.

"Please count me in," said Schacht. "It will be a pleasure to bring my act to your war bond game. Thanks for your offer of expenses from New York, but will be glad to pay my own expenses for such a worthy cause. I would like to perform again for my friends in Washington."

Now the owner of a prosperous New York restaurant, Schacht is coming out of retirement from the baseball-clowning business to stage his show in Washington.

Before retiring as a baseball coach to make a profession of clowning, Schacht was one of the higest paid coaches in the major

Alex Gives Macks Only Four Hits

Error by Priddy Prevents Shutout; Harris, Lowry Pounded by Nats

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, May 5.—In the South American way, as exemplified by good neighbor Alex Carrasquel, the Nats won a ball game today. They beat the Athletics, 8 to 1, with Carrasquel holding the A's to four hits and missing a shut-out only because of an error in the ninth.

There was some lusty socking of the balata ball by the Nats during the afternoon, but in the main it was the ball-flipping of the inscrutable Venezulean that got 'em home. They gave him only three runs to work with until they put on a five-run crusher in the ninth.

Carrasquel gave up one hit in the second inning, another in the third, one more in the eighth and a fourth in the ninth, and that was all. He was licking Connie Mack's athletes for the third time this season, but Carrasquel was something of a back-slider today despite his four hit job. The last time he faced the A's, he held 'em to two hits and shut 'em out.

Pasted Lowry's Pitching

The Nats tied into Luman Harris, the A's right-hander, with great vigor but didn't get many runs until the ninth, when they pasted the pitching of Samuel Lowry, a rookie up from Wilmington. Jake Early broke out of his enduring slump with a pair of two-baggers that rattled the right field wall. Garry Priddy broke his own hit famine with a double and single. Bob Johnson walloped a triple to deepest center.

It wasn't Carrasquel's fault that he didn't shut the A's out. It was Gerry Priddy's. After Jo-Jo doubled with one out in the ninth, Priddy relayed the ball over Third Baseman Clary's head and White scampered all the way home on the wild heave.

Speed paid off for the Nats in the third inning when they collected their first run. Clary coaxed a walk out of Harris and stole second despite a pitch-out. The fleet Case then laid down a bunt and beat it out. Clary scored from third on Spence's grounder to Suder.

The Nats went into heavier production in the next inning. Priddy walloped a long drive to center that White couldn't hold after a long run and it was a double. Early promptly moved him home with a two-bagger that crashed

Mexican Jesse Flores Sets A. L. Pitching Pace With A's

Rookie Hurler Has Allowed 13 Hits in 34 Innings With Marvelous Control Big Asset

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 5.—A Mexican bull-fighting fan who never saw a major league ball game until April 20 is the pitching sensation of the infant season in Philadelphia—and probably among the players the American League over.

In a word, Jesse Sandoval Flores, up from Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast League, is "wowing" 'em for Connie Mack's Athletics with a screwball that baffles the best and control that veterans are calling uncanny.

The A's hired Flores on trial after the Chicago Cubs had rejected him, and Connie wasn't optimistic.

But in 34 innings Jesse has allowed only three runs—two actually earned—and only 13 hits. He's outpitched such masterful veterans as Tex Hughson, 22-game winner last year with the Boston Red Sox, and Dutch Leonard, peer of the league's knuckleball hurlers. He's won two and lost one—the latter a 1-0 to Boston although he easily was the best pitcher on the field.

Connie took up his option after he went 15⅔ innings against Washington and allowed no runs and five hits for a 2-1 victory.

First Baseman Dick Siebert, a veteran of the majors, says "I've never seen a youngster break in with such stuff and poise—standing out there watching him you'd think he'd been pitching in the big leagues for years."

Back in Guadalajara, Jalso, Mexico, where Jesse hails from, bull fighting was the No. 1 sport and Jesse says, "Sure I love bull fights, but once I started pitching baseballs in the back yard, I said to myself, 'Jesse, this is your game.'"

Not an A's fan disagrees.

Cubs Beat Cards, 2-1, On Lucky Hit in 14th

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 5.—Claude Passeau, veteran Chicago Cubs' right-hander, and Max Lanier, St. Louis Cardinals' southpaw, dueled through 14 action-packed innings today before an "inning ending double play ball" bounded freakishly over Second Baseman Jimmy Brown's shoulder to score the run that gave the Chicagoans a 2-to-1 victory.

Heinz Backer, Cub rookie first baseman, was on second base with one out in the fourteenth when the Cardinals elected to have Lanier pass Shortstop Lenny Merullo to pitch to weak-hitting Catcher Chico Hernandez. The strategy seemed perfect when Hernandez sent a double play grounder right at Brown, but the ball veered away and over his shoulder to center field while Becker scored.

Stan Musial, who hit two triples, a double and a single, fumbled Becker's lead-off single in the final frame to put the winning run on second.

Passeau, in hanging up his first victory of the season after failing to finish seven innings in either of his previous two starts, was confronted with Cardinals in scoring position in every inning but the third, seventh and fourteenth. Lanier traveled a different path. From the end of the seventh through the thirteenth he allowed only one single. Each team made 12 hits, however.

Passeau himself drove in the Cubs' early run with a double that scored Outfielder Harry Lowrey in the seventh inning.

Walters Stars As Bucs Bow Under Arcs, 3-2

Cincinnati, May 5 (AP).—Bucky Walters pitched and batted the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-2 victory over Pittsburgh tonight in the first night game of the season, knocking in two runs with a single and holding the Pirates to five hits.

Bucky, getting his second victory in as many starts, struck out six. He was wild, walking five and making a wild pitch, but pulled out of holes in time.

His big single came in the second inning. Frank McCormick had lined out, and Gee Walker and Bert Haas singled, with Walker taking third and Haas second on the throw. Johnny Lanning purposely passed Eric Tipton to load the bases. Ray Mueller fouled out but Bucky shot the ball into the right field to score Walker and Haas.

Balk by Rookie Gives Yankees 4-3 Triumph

By the Associated Press

New York, May 5.—A rookie slip-up by Anton Karl, who accidentally stepped off the rubber while pitching with the bases loaded in the ninth inning, gave the New York Yankees a run on a balk today and a 4-to-3 triumph over the Boston Red Sox.

The American League leaders provided Hank Borowy a 3-to-2 margin in the first three innings, one of the runs being Charley Keller's second homer in the first frame.

But the Red Sox kept scrapping. In the fourth, Bobby Doerr tripled and scored on a fly by Al Simmons and in the ninth they knocked Borowy out with two runs to tie the score. In this rally Tom McBride walked, Doerr singled and after Simmons had popped, Tony Lupien also drew a pass.

At this point Johnny Murphy came to the mound and was greeted by Pete Fox' second double for two tallies. Joe Cronin batted for Jim Tabor and was intentionally walked to load the bases again, but Johnny Peacock grounded into a double play.

The Yanks came right back at Karl, who had taken over Boston's pitching duties after Tex Hughson was removed for a pinchhitter in the eighth. Roy Weatherly singled, Keller walked, Joe Gordon bunted, forcing Weatherly, and Nick Etten also walked to fill the bases.

Then Karl pitched to Bill Johnson without having his foot on the rubber and a balk was called giving the Yanks the game and credit to Murphy for his third victory without a defeat, although he had to face only three batters.

Winner of Derby To Finish Drills Tomorrow; Blue Swords to Work

Special Dispatch to The Post

Pimlico, May 5.—Count Fleet, who'll be an almost unbeatable choice in the weekend Preakness, showed Pimlico work watchers a sample of his wares thsi morning when he sauntered three quarters in 1:17, being pulled up in the final furlong. At no stage of his abbreviated journey did Johnny Longden ask the famous son of Reigh Count for speed.

Breaking at the 5-furlong pole on the backstretch, Mrs. John Hertz's Kentucky Derby winner loped the first eighth in 0:12 2-5 with his mouth wide open. He completed the quarter in 0:24 2-5, half in 0:50 2-5 and five eighths in 1:03, running against the bit.

The next morning move prior to the running of the $50,000 added classic will come Friday when Trainer Don Cameron "opens him up" with a short breeze, intended to sharpen his speed.

Johnny Longden, who came over from New York to work the son of Reigh Count, remained to pilot Who Me in the Oaks. He will be back again to work Count Fleet Friday morning, accepting mounts that afternoon.

Blue Swords, runner-up in the Kentucky Derby, had another easy day in his stall, not so distant from that of his recent conqueror. Tomorrow will bring a work morning for the son of Blue Larkspur, this being his only serious Pimlico trial for the Preakness.

Beau of Mine, who had been announced as a Preakness starter, providing he won Tuesday's public final at Jamaica, proved triumphant in that outing, but still will not face the starter in Saturday's mile and a sixteenth. He came out of the Long Island race lame, making the date of his next public appearance extremely problematical.

Winning Jockey in '07 Derby Dies in Detroit

Detroit, May 5 (AP).—Andrew Minder, 62, who rode Pink Star, a 15-to-1 shot, to a victory in the 1907 Kentucky Derby, died of heart disease today.

Minder, in his 20 years as a jockey, rode nearly 900 winners.

EQUILIBRIUM was in thick of forward contention from start and was eased up behind entry mate in final stages. BRIDLESPUR made repeated bad landings while forwardly placed early, dropped back and then closed willingly.

ASKMENOW, rated while in first flight to far turn, responded when asked, wore down ROYAL FLUSH to take command and was kept to urging to end. TOO TIMELY was off slowly, saved ground through on inside and closed under punishment. POMROSE was last away, lost ground while bettering position and closed with good energy on outside. WHO ME was allowed to settle into stride, gained gradually after opening quarter and hung in final eighth. ## Blair Swamps N. T. S. Nine, 13-4

Randy Edwards, Montgomery Blair's ace hurler, yesterday showed a complete reversal of form of two days ago, and pitched the Blazers to a five-hit, 13-4 victory over National Training School on the losers' diamond. Edwards also had an important hand in the scoring, rapping out three hits, one a home run.

The Blazers tallied four runs in the third, and then put the game on ice with a seven-run outburst in the fifth. "Boo" Clark led the assault in these two frames with a double and a triple in the respective innings.

Dodgers Unleash Full Power on Phillies to Score, 18 to 6

Flock Pounds 3 Pitchers For 24 Hits

Dolf Camilli Clouts Second Homer; Many Doubles Are Mixed Up in Heavy Barrage

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 5.—The Brooklyn Dodgers hit the season's high mark for both runs and hits today as they manhandled the Philadelphia Phillies for 23 hits in winning, 18 to 6.

Brooklyn's hits were good for a total of 33 bases and in the assortment were Dolph Camilli's second homer and half a dozen doubles by various teammates. Paul Warner and Augie Galan each made four hits.

The drubbing was administered to a trio of Philadelphia hurlers—Charley Fuchs, who lasted only the first inning and was charged with the defeat, Andy Lapihuska and Walter (Boom Boom) Beck. Brooklyn scored four runs in the first, two on Camilli's homer in the second, five in the fourth and three in the eighth.

Max Macon coasted along behind this barrage, giving a dozen hits but keeping the Phils scoreless till the sixth. However, he was replaced by Newt Kimball for the final frame.

Arena Mat Trio Stages Corny Drama

George Macricostas, one of the myriad Golden Greeks who haunt the Nation's perspiration emporia, won a rough feature wrestling match from the Red Czar before 1000 fist-waving fans at Turner's Arena last night, via disqualification in 35 minutes.

The drama's cast consisted of a funny fat man (Referee Tiny Bouque), a sinister citizen in a red mask and a pink kimona (The Czar) and the Golden Greek, and the trio teamed admirably to put on a comedy worthy of Hollywood.

Whenever the wrestlers weren't apparently giving their all in a vain attempt to stomp each others brains out, they'd collaborate to convert the 350-pound arbiter into a strip-teaser. Toward this goal they succeeded in bareing him to a critical audience by ripping his shirt to shreds.

Both men were tossed into the crowd, and during one of the Czar's flights he was given a resounding whack on the head by a belligerent lady in a pink hat.

Macricostas' impersonation of agony was so realistic that by popular demand Referee Bouque halted the match and gave it to George on a disqualification. Gallantly, the Greek attempted to refuse the laurel and proceed to hammer at the hooded fellow some more until the officials cleared the ring.

Man Mountain Dean, the unofficial mayor of Tobacco Road, upset Dick Lever in nine minutes, pinning Lever after catapulting him over his shoulder as Richard missed with a flying tackle.

Gypsy Chief Chewacki and Tom Mahoney worked to a stormy stalemate which gave the patrons a thousand rich vocalic thrills.

Johnny (Tripod) Long pinned King Clancy with an Irish whip, body slam and press in 15 minutes, and Tom George and Ace Freeman struggled to a draw in the opener.

OSCAR ELDER.

Paul's Pitchin' With His Head as Well as His Arm Now

Dizzy's Kid Brother Allows Tigers Only One Hit in Relief Role; Browns' Pilot Elated

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 5.—The Cleveland Indians pulled into a first place tie with the New York Yankees when southpaw Chubby Dean whipped Chicago in the opener of a twin bill today, 2 to 1, but fell back again as the White Sox captured the 11-inning aftermath, 5 to 2.

Rookie Dick Culler's two-run single in the eleventh inning of the second game ended a tight pitching duel between Chicago's Lee (Buck) Ross and Allie Reynolds, who had held the Sox scoreless after relieving Al Milnar in the third frame.

Before the inning ended, the Sox added an unnecessary run on Wally Moses' steal of home.

After leading all the way, the Tribe received a scare in the ninth inning of the opener when Dean walked Joe Kuhel and then Don Kolloway. Moses' single scored Kuhel with two out and the runners made second and third on Hank Edwards' bad throw to the plate. Dean, who had given only six hits, was relieved by Jack Salveson. He walked Jim Grant on four pitches but induced Ralph Hodgin, another rookie pinch batter, to foul out.

Dean Impressive in Comeback Against World Series Victims

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 5.—The box score of the Detroit Tigers-St. Louis Browns' series opener hints at the drama of a former star pitcher starting a comeback attempt against the team he beat twice in the memorable World Series of 1934.

In cold print, it listed "Dean" as a pitcher for the Browns—a terse identification of the once great Paul Dean, who paired with brother Dizzy to reach baseball fame in the Gashouse days of the St. Louis Cardinals. In the 1934 World Series against Detroit, "Me 'n' Paul" each won two games after pitching a total of 49 victories during the regular season.

Arm trouble forced Paul out of the major league and he tried without success to return with the Cardinals and then with the New York Giants before the Browns bought him from Houston, via Washington, this winter.

Making his first appearance with the Browns yesterday, he allowed only one hit in 4 1-3 innings of relief pitching, setting the mighty Rudy York twice with two men on base.

Although his arm has lost its power to fog the ball across the plate, Dean displayed what Manager Luke Sewell called "deceptive speed." He showed a fine curve and perfect control.

Lew Hanbury, Phillips Meet Next Monday

Lew Hanbury, promising young lightweight who went down before Jimmy (The Spoiler) Phillips recently in what was called an upset, will be given a chance to erase that defeat Monday night in a 10-round cofeature to the Al Hart-Larry Lane heavyweight fuss at Griffith Stadium, opening the outdoor season.

Hanbury, who only last week attracted attention when he boxed two sizzling rounds with Henry Armstrong when "The Hammer" was training for his fight with Saverio Turiello, yesterday was signed to meet Phillips, formerly known as Jiggs McKnight of Baltimore in a return bout.

Phillips, who won the name of "Spoiler" after whipping four straight local boys—Bernie Cady, Roy Lewis, Oscar Wright and Hanbury—and then boxed a draw with flashy Jimmy Collins, is one of the cleverest boxers unearthed here during the indoor season and he had a punch, would be in a threat for titular consideration.

Tigers Thump Browns, 5 to 1, For 4th in Row

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 5.—Manager Luke Sewell tried a revamped lineup, and before the game was over, threw in four pitchers and three pinchhitters in an effort to stop the ambitious Tigers today, but Detroit swept on to its fourth consecutive triumph over St. Louis, 5 to 1.

A disastrous first inning, in which an error by George McQuinn led to three runs, messed up Sewell's strategy. Nelson Potter had retired the first two men to face him, but McQuinn threw Dick Wakefield's bounder high to Potter covering first.

Potter, unnerved by this turn of events, gave up a walk and three consecutive hits, good for three runs. Detroit scored again in the second and tallied in the fourth on a single and Bob Harris' triple.

against the right field wall. They got their second run of the inning when Carrasquel singled to center.

The five-run ninth commenced with Sullivan's single to left and a walk to Carrasquel. Clary filled the bases by laying down a superduper hunt, and Case moved two runs home with a double over third base. Spence scored Clary with an infield out, and Bob Johnson scored Case with a torrid line-drive triple to center. Vernon's fly to center got Johnson home with the fifth run.

Carrasqual Gives A's Trouble

While the Nats were making their 13 hits, Carrasquel was giving the A's a horrible time of it. The big Venezuelan was side-arming the right-handers in the A's line-up, and blowing his fast ball past the left-handers.

He ran into a squall in the second when Siebert tripled with one out, but in that situation he threw out Suder personally and struck out Hall. He didn't encounter any more trouble until the eighth, when Pinch-hitter Elmer Valo doubled to right with one out. The A's sent up two more pinch-hitters but they didn't get to first base.

Carrasquel now owns a record of three victories and no defeats, with the A's his victim on each occasion. Manager Bluege tonight announced Carrasquel would be retained by the Nats.

The Post's War Bond Game, which will set a new high in baseball receipts, is being staged on the basis of admission by war bond only. Every bank in the District of Columbia is now prepared to distribute the tickets to the contest to bond purchasers starting on Monday morning.

When the Norfolk Sailors move into Griffith Stadium, Washington fans will be seeing the club that is generally rated superior to any team now playing in the majors.

"That Norfolk team is undoubtedly the greatest club ever put together outside of organized baseball," said Clark Griffith yesterday. "It has power and pitching and a batting order that any manager would like to have."

The Nats' owner was referring to the presence of such as Outfielders Don Padgett and Dom DiMaggio, Shortstop Phil Rizzuto, Second Baseman Benny McCoy, Catcher Vince Smith and Pitchers Freddie Hutchinson, Charley Wagner and Tom Early, who are now members of Uncle Sam's Navy at the Norfolk station.

The game, sponsored by The Post as a contribution to the war bond campaign, will break a 15-day baseball famine in Washington when the teams meet on the night of May 24. The Nats will have been on the road from May 10 to May 24.

How to Purchase Tickets To Post's War Bond Game

Here is the formula for obtaining tickets to The Post's War Bond Game between the crack Norfolk Naval Training Station team and the Nats at Griffith Stadium on the night of May 24.

1—Buy a war bond at any of the District of Columbia banks or their branches, beginning Monday.

2—Ask for a ticket to the War Bond Game along with your purchase.

3—Take your exchange ticket to the boxoffice at Griffith Stadium on any day after May 12 between the hours of 2 and 8 p. m. and receive a seat to the game.

Tickets will be issued for all value bonds from $25 to $1000. One ticket will be given for each bond purchased, with a limit set at four.

Pyle to Face Wolff Today In A's Finale

Philadelphia, May 5.—Ewald Pyle, a rookie with a considerable pitching record since he joined the Nats, will get another outing tomorrow when Manager Ossie Bluege sends him to the mound in the series finale with the Athletics.

Into the game, Pyle will take a boast of not having permitted an earned run in his last 24 innings of work, and only one run of any type in that stretch.

The skinny, left-handed bargain the Nats drafted from Toledo for $7500, lost a 1-0 game to the Yankees in his first start, a four-hitter. His second effort was a six-hit shut-out job against the A's. Last week, he went to the mound and beat the Yanks, 4-1, on six hits, shutting them out in the last eight innings.

Roger Wolff, the A's young right-hander, who, some ball players claim, has a better knuckle ball than Dutch Leonard, will be Pyle's opposition . . . Before today's game, little Ellis Clary was still brooding over his wild throw that caused trouble for Dutch Leonard yesterday . . . Clary today performed a base-running feat when he stole second against the A's despite a pitch-out . . . Bob Johnson, whose long, high flies have been caught with regularity all season, changed his tactics today and walloped the ball at clothesline height for a triple to center in the ninth . .

13 Warships, 2 Air Units Win Citations

The Navy Department announced last night that presidential unit citations have been awarded to 13 warships and two aircraft units for outstanding performance of duty in combat with the enemy.

The units honored include:

Cruisers San Francisco and Atlanta, for action in the Solomon Islands during which the San Francisco was badly damaged and the Atlanta was lost.

Destroyers Laffey, McFarland and Smith for service in the Solomon Islands. The Laffey was lost in the battle of Savo Island.

Destroyers Bernadou, Cole and Dallas, which took part in the occupation of French North Africa.

The submarines Greenling, Guardfish, Nautilus, Trout and Wahoo, which have sunk more than 225,000 tons of Japanese shipping and damaged an additional 70,000 tons.

Navy Torpedo Squadron Eight of the aircraft carrier Hornet, which lost 29 out of 30 men in the Battle of Midway.

Marine Aircraft Group 22, which fought off a Japanese attack on Midway Island in June, 1942.

Ships which win the presidential unit citation are entitled to fly a distinctive pennant, and all officers and men of the cited unit, after two citations, wear a ribbon with blue, yellow and red horizontal stripes.

The citiation for Torpedo Squadron Eight recalled that this unit—first to sight the enemy at Midway—scored a number of torpedo hits on Japanese warships before the squadron was all but wiped out by devastating antiaircraft fire. Of the 30 men forming the squadron, the only survivor was Ensign George H. Gay, Houston, Tex., who was shot down at sea and later rescued by a destroyer.

Of the cruiser San Francisco, the citation said that in the Savo Island battle of October 11-12, the ship silenced and disabled an enemy battleship at a range of 3000 yards, sank one enemy destroyer and damaged two other enemy vessels, while suffering 15 major caliber hits.

The cruiser Atlanta was cited for outstanding performance during the Guadalcanal battle of November 12-13.

"Struck by one torpedo and no less than 49 shells," the citation said, "the Atlanta, after sinking an enemy destroyer and repeatedly hitting a cruiser which later went down."

week. Under the overtime provision the employe paid $2900 and under gets an increase of 21.6 per cent over base salary for the 48-hour week. Employes paid over $2900 get the same amount of overtime pay for the same hours; that is, overtime on only $2900.

7. Department heads are permitted to give compensatory time off in lieu of overtime pay for hours worked in any week in excess of 48. This provision wasn't carried in the old act.

8. Another new provision provides that no employe can be paid additional compensation amounting to more than 25 per cent of his earned basic compensation. For example, an employe whose salary is $1200 couldn't be paid more than $300 additional.

9. District of Columbia employes are covered under the bill.

10. Exempted are the 6000 per diem employes of the Government Printing Office and other Federal workers whose salaries are fixed by wage boards. Incidentally, a joint union delegation yesterday called on Senator Hayden, chairman of the Joint Committee on Printing, on the G. P. O. wage dispute. The Senator promised early hearings.

The act will expire June 30, 1945, and it disposes of the worst employe pay problem in Government. Congress earlier had voted postal employes a $300 bonus plus straight time for overtime.

Budget Bureau is required to make economies in Government under the bill. It must report not less frequently than the first day of each quarter of the savings made as a result of the lengthened work week and the elimination of duplication and nonessential work.

As reported here yesterday, the cost of the overtime pay bill on an 11-month basis was estimated at approximately 600 million dollars but the President has asked Congress to appropriate only 122 million dollars. The difference was absorbed by the agencies.

OCD Pleased By Donation Of Trucks

The Washington Board of Trade and truck owners in the city were commended yesterday by Civilian Defense Director James M. Landis for providing vehicles on which to mount OCD auxiliary fire pumps.

The campaign conducted by the trade board, Landis pointed out, has resulted in securing more than 40 trucks from private firms for mounting the pumps allocated to the District.

The firms were listed by the OCD as:

American Sales Co., R. P. Andrews Paper Co., S. Kann Sons Co., Lansburgh & Bros., Chestnut Farms Chevy Chase Dairy, Griffith-Consumers, Hecht Co., Marlow Coal Co., Woodward & Lothrop, Barbor & Ross, Doubleday-Hill Electric Co., Mike Laundry, Manhattan Laundry, Julius Garfinckel Co., Fries, Beall & Sharp, Embassy Fairfax Dairy, Frank Jelleff Co., Simon Distributing Co., Washington Shade & Awning Co., William E. Miller Furniture Co. and Metchimer Co.

The Washington Board of Trade committee on public order, which conducted the local drive for trucks, is composed of: Harry J. Miller, chairman; Jack J. Blank, Washington I. Cleveland, M. F. Finan, J. M. Jamieson, Louis Lowe, R. E. Nash, Robert H. Ross, James A. Sullivan, Glen M. Vickerey and John M. Waters.

Government Girl Plane Fund Total Increased to $156,100

Navy Yard Gifts Boost Receipts After Deadline

Spurning deadlines and continuing their Government Girl campaign, 9679 employes at the Washington Navy Yard yesterday turned in for deposit with the Treasury $9679 to swell the total fund for the Army and Navy planes to $156,100—far beyond the most sanguine predictions.

The Navy Department now leads all agencies in total contributions, with $31,654, with the War Department $1056 behind.

"We are not yet through our campaign," Lieut. E. B. Hands, who has handled the campaign at the Navy Yard, explained. "In fact, when we started the drive a week ago a lot of us didn't know it was officially over April 24.

"Then we decided it didn't matter much if it was. They still need fighting planes, and the fighting planes need equipment," he said.

To Represent Yard

Two of the most successful canvassers, Leola Genevive Thurston and Rose E. Fowler, were chosen to represent the Navy Yard's 15,000 employes in the Guard of Honor for the presentation ceremonies of the two planes Sunday at 3 p. m. on the Ellipse south of the White House.

Both of these employes have collected nearly $1000 each, according to Lieutenant Hands. Both are married. Mrs. Thurston is employed in the optical shop and Mrs. Fowler is an ordnance worker.

Forty-five offices and shops are represented in the single daily contribution, which for one agency is the largest amount to be received during any single day of the campaign.

Guards of Honor last night gathered in the auditorium of the Department of Commerce for their "marks of distinction" for the Sunday afternoon christening. They are attractively arranged corsages of war stamps and tri-colored ribbons.

Planes Being Groomed

Information was released by the War Department that both the F-4UI Chance Vought Navy Corsair and the Army P-51 Mustang fighters were "on the grounds" being groomed to make their official salute to the throng before which they will be officially designated "Government Girl."

Final arrangements are rapidly taking shape for the ceremonies, which will take only an hour and 10 minutes.

All participants in the program have been reached by letter and their functions explained, Miss Eleanor Leech, committe esecretary, said.

"Although it was anticipated that all clolections would have been in the Treasury Department a week ago, L. L. Collie, chief of the division of bookkeeping and warrants, said yesterday, "There's no good reason why contributions should be turned down so long as the war is going on."

Soldier's Mortgage Payment Reduced Under Relief Act

In one of the first decisions of its kind rendered here under provisions of the Soldiers and Sailors Relief Act as amended in 1940, District Court Justice James M. Proctor, yesterday ordered monthly mortgage payments of $70 reduced to $39 on property owned by a member of the armed forces.

Attorney William R. Lichtenberg represented Private Sidney Herwood, who owns a home at 1643 Fort Davis Place Southeast, which has a $7000 mortgage on it. Lichtenberg told the court that Herwood had earned $300 a month before going into the armed forces and that now, as a private, his earnings were reduced to $50 a month.

The decision requires Herwood to pay all interest and real estate taxes that are due now. The $39 monthly payments are to continue for six months after the war.

Distributors Allowed to Pay More for Milk

The Office of Price Administration yesterday authorized milk distributors for the Arlington-Alexandria and Baltimore-Annapolis areas to advance their maximum buying prices 43 and 35 cents per hundredweight, respectively.

Cost of this increase will be borne by the Commodity Credit Corporation and prices to the consumer will not be advanced, OPA said.

This move was necessary to avoid diversion of milk from these areas to Washington and Philadelphia, where prices recently were advanced by the same means of C. C. C. subsidies.

Fire Escape Rules Eased By Board

Changes Eliminate Requirements for 3-Story Buildings, Some Higher Ones

The District Commissioners gave up the last stand in their exploded campaign for rooming house safety last night and sponsored proposals to eliminate altogether requirements for fire escapes on three-story and some four-story rooming houses, and to permit the use of wooden fire escapes for three-story apartment houses.

These emergency amendments to the Building Code will be discussed at public hearings on new regulations and on the general housing picture here, to be held at 10 a. m. on May 17 at the District Building.

The proposals, recommended to the Commissioners by the District regulations committee, would adopt most of the present rooming house regulations, but offer the following spceific changes:

Specific Changes

"If a building it not in excess of three stories, nor over 30 feet in height, and is used as a lodging, rooming or boarding house as defined in the Lodging, Roming and Boarding House Regulations, existing exits shall be considered as sufficient and suitable means of egress, and no fire protective appliances will be required. In determining height as here used, measurement shall be from the adjoining ground or areaway to the highest window sill.

"If a building is not in excess of four stories in height, and is used as a lodging, rooming or boarding house, and any part of the fourth story is used for sleeping purposes, all provisions of the Building Code shall apply. In case the fourth story is not used for sleeping purposes, and the occupant submits an affadavit that it will not be so used, the provisions of the above sub-paragraph shall apply.

"All provisions of the Building Code will apply to apartment houses, except that if an apartment building is not in excess of three stories in height, and the Building Code requires one or more fire escapes, said fire escapes may be of wood, of a design to be approved by the inspector of buildings. An apartment within the meaning of these regulations shall consist of a separate household unit with bath and kitchen exclusively for the use of the persons occupying such unit."

No Doubt of Retreat

In explaining these regulations, the Commissioners left no doubt as to the completeness of their retreat from the offensive against the possibilities of casualties in rooming houses to which public and congressional reaction to a recent series of fatal fires had spurred them.

"The proposed emergency regulation requires no fire escape nor fire protective appliance (for three-story rooming houses) regardless of occupancy," Assistant Engineer Commissioner Joseph D. Arthur, jr., pointed out in written comments on the proposals.

To counteract this relaxation of the present regulation requiring fire escapes and other fire protective appliances for three-story buildings with more than nine persons sleeping above the first floor, Arthur said that occupancy will be limited by rigid application of other rooming house regulations.

The changes in the regulation for four-story rooming houses were a concession to persons who protested at the regulations hearings held April 15 that the present ruling requiring fire escapes if nine persons are domiciled anywhere in the building is "unreasonable."

"The proposed regulation will require fire escapes, in all cases, regardless of occupancy, if the fourth story is used for sleeping purposes. If it is not, the building will in effect be considered a three-story building," Arthur said.

The Commissioners have explained the abrupt cessation of their attitude of "getting tough with rooming house licensing violators" as an acceptance of the circumstances of war.

Pair of Siamese Cats Win Prize as Most Outstanding Pets

Among more than 100 entries in yesterday's pet show at Sidwell Friends School—which saw a butterfly as the most unusual, an ant the smallest, and a pig the most useful pet—a pair of Siamese cats was judged to be the most outstanding pets on the campus.

The cats, owned by Grace Etheredge, art teacher at the school, the rare animals won the silver cup for the best poise, looks and upbringing.

More than 200 parents and children attended the show which was held at the school grounds, 3901 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, and has been sponsored since its inception several years ago by the second grade class. Arrangements were under the direction of Mrs. Charlotte Moreau, teacher of the class, and 14 judges were given the task of selecting the best among good.

An amazing variety of dogs, cats, rabbits, turtles, fish, mice and other animals were on the field, competing with each other in beauty and numerous extraordinary qualities of race and behaviour.

The butterfly, winning the first prize blue ribbon as most unusual pet, was entered by Dirk Keller, fourth grade. The ant won the award for being the smallest pet, entered by Joan Conger, fifth grade. The most useful pet—the pig—was brought in by Caroline Hildenbrand, first grade.

D. C. Education Office Gets Farm Funds

"Youth farm program" funds, alloted to the District on the basis of population rather than need were released to the Office of Education, by a motion of the Board of Education yesterday.

As the "Out-of-School Youth Agricultural Program" cannot be conducted on a large scale in the District, the Office of Education had requested return of $3600 certified for cost of instruction and supervision and $1650 for cost of equipment and space. Release of claim to a $16,250 reserve fund was also asked and approved.

The board also approved a recommendation that Lieut. Col. Wallace M. Craigie, professor of military science and tactics, divisions 1-9, continue in that capacity for another year, although he becomes 70 (retirement age) on May 25.

Indicative of the trend of military interests among youths, the Army Selectee's Handbook will be added to senior high school libraries, according to another recommendation approved by the board.

No report was made on the question of propriety of inclusion of Unit 1 entitled "Reproductive System" in the course of study in health instruction for senior high schools, as the physical education teachers who prepared the course are still reviewing the section which Dr. James A. Gannon, board member, termed "shocking."

Also deferred for further consideration were suggestions that cornerstones of future school buildings bear names of members of the Board of Education and that the name of the Deanwood School be changed to George Washington Carver School.

Disabled Veteran Unit Elects Two Officers

National Capital Chapter Number 2 of the Disabled American Veterans has announced the election of two new officers.

Schwartz, a veteran of the present war, has been elected to the post of Adjutant. He is 23 years of age, enlisted in the Marines in 1938, and was given an honorable discharge.

Mrs. Rawls' Recital Provides Contrast to Stress of Times

By Ray C. B. Brown

District Chapter American Guild of Organists presents Kathryn Hill Rawls in a recital on Wednesday night in Washington Chapel of Latter-Day Saints. Program: My Heart Is Filled With Longing (Bach), Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring (Bach), O Lord, Have Mercy (Bach), Toccata on O Filii et Filiae (Farnam), Rosace (Mulet), Chorale in A minor (Franck), Little Bells of Our Lady of Lourdes and Vesper Processional (Gaul), Festival Toccata (Fletcher).

Pursuing the fourth annual festival of organ music, the local chapter of the American Guild of Organists presented one of its members, Kathryn Hill Rawls, last evening in Washington Chapel. For those seeking relief from the stress of the times, her program had just the right soothing effect, as it was restful and conducive to meditation for the most part.

BROWN

There were only two compositions of the brilliant and stimulating type: Lynnwood Farnam's short toccata on the old tune, "O Filii et Filiae," and Fletcher's pompously registered "Festival Toccata."

That Mrs. Rawls is a musician of taste and acute sensitiveness to shades of meaning was evident in her fine readings of three chorale-preludes by Bach, to each of which she imparted its individual mood. There was poignancy in "My Heart is Filled with Longing," simple and quiet happiness in "Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring," and repentant awe in "O Lord, Have Mercy."

Bach's chorale-preludes alone are a disproof of T. S. Eliot's dictum that the emotion of art is impersonal. In form they are little masterpieces of art, cunning in counterpoint and the intricate fitting of accents, and each is suffused with Bach's personal feeling. Without that sincere and spiritual motivation, they would be nothing but empty patterns, and while patterns may be pretty they do not constitute art, which implies a creator using patterns for a significant purpose.

Other peaceful and relaxing works on the program were "Rosace" from Henri Mulet's "Byzantine Sketches," Franck's eloquent Chorale in A minor and Harvey Gaul's atmospheric "Little Bells of Our Lady of Lourdes and Vesper Processional."

At the opening recital of the festival on Monday night, Theodore Schaefer shared the program with the Washington Missionary College Choir which did some excellent singing a cappella under the direction of George W. Greer. In the time at his disposal the recitalist played artistically and with discriminative registration Mottu's "Vesperale," a "Pantomine" by Philip James, E. William Doty's "Mist," a "Flemish Rhapsody" by Peeters, and a Carillon by Leo Sowerby.

Capitol Stamp Proposed

A bill to provide for the issuance of a special series of 3-cent postage stamps commemorating the 150th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the United States Capitol was introduced in the Senate yesterday.

Senator Capper (Republican) of Kansas, who presented the bill, explained that the anniversary would fall on September 18 of this year. He suggested that the design might show George Washington placing the cornerstone.

Capper said the bill was introduced at the request of James F. Duhamel, historian of the Society of Natives, who had pointed out that since most States had had stamps commemorative of events in their history the District might well signalize such an important event in this manner.

Grand Opera Program

War Department employes will be treated to a program of grand opera selections tonight at 8:30 p. m. in the Departmental Auditorium on Constitution Avenue, between Twelfth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest.

Sponsored by the War Department, the program will include portions of famous operas, sung by Dorothy Remington, soprano; William Webster, tenor, and the Ladies Victory Chorus of the Washington Grand Opera Guild. Tickets will be distributed free of charge by employe counselors.

Man Convicted

A jury in District court yesterday refused to allow the significance of a name to influence it and convicted George Washington, 29, Negro, 307 First Street Northwest, of stealing 55 sacks of potatoes and a truck from the Kossow Brothers Produce Co., 1233 Maine Avenue Southwest. The trial was held before Justice Matthew F. McGuire.

Washington, a former employe of the produce company, denied the charge and said he was in Philadelphia on March 23 when the theft occurred. Assistant United States Attorney John Conliffe told the jury that Washington had stolen the truck and then the potatoes. The former was recovered; the whereabouts of the potatoes remain a mystery.

Fisherman Hurt in Fall

Oliver B. Jones, 50, of 506½ Second Street Southeast, escaped with minor head cuts yesterday when he fell about 20 feet on the rocks above Chain Bridge while fishing. The accident happened on the Virginia Shore of the Potomac River and he received first aid at Georgetown Hospital.

Mouths Water, Dealers Wail As Potato Shipment Goes AWOL

Mystery entered the potato famine scene here yesterday when dealers were unable to find the consignee of five carloads that arrived Tuesday and yesterday.

What with the potatoles days through which wholesale produce dealers are now going a car of potatoes is watched as covetously as Hitler watches the growing air strength of the Allies.

Yet the Food Distribution Adminsitration enigmatically, and laconically, announced that two cars of Maine potatoes (oh gem without price) arrived Tuesday, and yesterday one Maine and two Texas cars (greater than the treasures of India) were reported in the city.

Forlornly eyeing their empty potatao bins, local dealers speculated on their destinations:

Some of the large chain stores might have bought them—at a premium of $150 a car—and planned to use them as "pullers" to get customers into their stores. The spuds thus would be rationed three pounds to a customer.

The Maine product may have been sold for seed.

The Army or Navy may have been the consignees.

(If the Army was not the consignee, dealers said that branch of the services would put the snatch on them when they discovered they were here. Quartermasters at Fort Washington and Fort Myer said yes, they had no potatoes yesterday morning.)

A check of wholesalers brought only this answer:

"I wish they were mine. No, I don't know who got them."

G. U. Graduate Promoted on Battlefield

Leading the remnants of his battered company from a German trap during the taking of Mateur brought a promotion on the field to Harris, graduate of Georgetown in a captaincy for Lieut. Richard L. 1941, it was revealed here yesterday.

His company was in the battalion commanded by Maj. Robert Cullis, of Jamaica Plains, Boston, which held a dominating hill against three big counterattacks by the Nazis. Capt. Harris' few men were all that was left of the battalion and they continued to hold the remainder of the day, finally getting out of the trap of surrounding Germans.

During the fight on the hill one of the men succeeded in laying a telephone line back to an artillery position and Capt. Harris was able to direct big gun fire against the enemy.

His men were discovered, the next day, resting beside some field guns by the general commanding the area who asked for Harris. Told the officer had gone back to the front, the general caught up with him and said:

"Nice work captain," thus announcing his immediate promotion.

Captain Harris is the son of Basil Harris, of Rye N. Y., president of the United States Lines. He was captain of the Georgetown golf team in 1941. After graduation, having the advanced R. O. T. C. course, he received a commission in the Reserves.

He took part in varsity track, football and sailing as wel as golf. He was a member of St. Berchman's Society and the Pathfinder's Club.

Victory Baby Project Draws Many Letters

Letters describing potential service babies an dtheir uniformed fathers who have never seen them yesterday piled into the mail box of The Post Victory Baby Editor, as Washington area mothers enthusiastically indorsed the new plan to tell servicemen of their newborn.

Mrs. John Rusenko of Congress Heights, who is ineligible for the competition since her soldier husband already has seen his Christmas Day baby, Johnny, jr., writes:

"I think this is a wonderful idea and I know it will bring great joy to hearts all over the world. What you are doing, no money can buy. Of course my husband, still in the United States, has been fortunate to see both our babies (in addition to Johnny, jr., there is Catherine Anna, 16 months old."

Comments Mrs. Everette C. Howze of 2332 Q Street Southeast, "The Post should be congratulated on such a splendid enterprise. I read recently that there were three things which were builders of morale for the troops abroad: food, money and letters."

Tomorrow noon will be the deadline for communications to be considered in the first selections of Washington Victory Babies. The Post will choose a pair of Victory Babies each week, photograph them with their mothers, publish stories and pictures in Sunday editions and reproduce them for mailing to fathers of the chosen babies.

CHAPTER IV

"No, Miss Lisa, there was a terrible lot of mist this mornin' and my chest is cuttin' up bad again. I intend to go directly when the sun gets a little higher."

"Well, it's never going to get any higher than right now, so you'd better get over there." Lisa had no patience for Slade's chest. He had been just managing to get along on his half of the proceeds from Lisa's chickens, but lately even that was too much work.

She found Effie cooking a batch of her special herb medicine for Slade. Effie was delighted that Lisa wasn't going away. "I'll be over in two or three days to get the house cleaned up for you," she said. "My, I hope they'll be nice people!"

Lisa speculated on that too, during the afternoon. It would be nice to have a man and wife and maybe two children, not too small, just the right size to take on picnics or fishing in the river if they'd sit still in the boat. She pictured two chubby little blonde children, and she pictured their father, tall and lean and very distinguished. He would smoke a pipe and play out on the lawn in the evenings with the two children.

Meanwhile she put on her overalls and decided to open up the two closed bedrooms and see how much cleaning would be necessary. She wouldn't have to bother cooking dinner but could really get at the house.

It was sunset when a long, tomato-red convertible pulled up with slamming brakes in the drive. Lisa was sweeping a rug on the porch and she stood open-mouthed while a tall( dark-haired young man in a polo coat pulled a calfskin bag from the seat beside him and ran up the steps. "Hello," he said, "I suppose you're the maid. I didn't know whether you'd be here yet or not. I'm Johnny Bradford."

"Who?" she said faintly and then, "Are you the people who are going to rent this place?"

"I'm the person who rented it. My agent is taking care of all the details, so I came right up. Couldn't stand it in New York another night."

"But," she said, "you're . . . your family? When . are they coming?"

"Family?" he said. "Haven't got any except an aunt in Peoria. Lord, this is a lonely place, Wonderful! Just what I need! How about supper? I'm hungry!"

She nodded vaguely and ran into the house without speaking. And from the back door, she ran the whole way to Effie's. "Effie!" she gasped. "You'll have to come over and cook supper quick! He's here, Effie, and it's just him! There's no family!

During the first week of John Bradford's residence in the Alden household, Lisa found herself wondering several times if New York wouldn't have been much less hectic. Mr. Bradford was charming and he was young and he was nice looking in a careless way, but he was also eccentric. Effie just came right out and said he was crazy, thus dismissing his antics from her mind, but Lisa was alternately fascinated by his charm and infuriated by his ideas. He never did anything she expected him to, from the first day when she had been planning a welcome for a nice little family and he arrived two weeks early, with no family and not looking much like any kind of a writer, especially a playwright.

Simon Golde was another thing. He was Mr. Bradford's business agent and he arrived two days after Mr. Bradford with the rest of the luggage. In half an hour he was out in the kitchen to inspect the staff. He approved of Effie, but wasn't so sure of Lisa. "A little young," he said. "And maybe too pretty. Maybe too much of a distraction for Mr. Bradford. He must have a play in three months. He has a contract. No distractions."

"I'm sorry," Lisa said. "But I come with the house."

"Yes, yes," the agent agreed absently. "I'll speak to the owner about it when I see him." He had a great many ideas about improving the house although he failed to see why anyone would want to live in it in the first place. In a little book he made notes of the improvements he was going to tell the owner about.

"Symie!" Bradford would shout. "Either you go back to New York or I'm going back! I don't want the place decorated; I don't want a bathtub . . . and I don't want you looking over my shoulder to see if I've got the first act yet. Get out, Symie, please!"

So Symie left after a week and things were a little quieter. Sometimes they wouldn't see Bradford all day until 6 when Lisa would knock on his study door and tell him dinner was ready. Other days he roamed through the house like a restless prisoner, watching Effie clean house, drying the dishes for Lisa and asking innumerable questions.

Lisa couldn't make up her mind whether to dislike him or feel sorry for him. He was terribly nervous and tired and desperate to write a good play. One day he asked her, "I don't suppose you saw either one of my last two plays?"

"I was only in New York once, when I was 5," Lisa said.

"I'm glad you didn't see them. They were terrible."

The next day he said, "I suppose you dream every night of being able to go to New York and be an actress or something?"

"Not at all," she contradicted. "I've done everything I could to stay right here in the valley."

"You've got a nice, cool, efficient mind. What's your name again?"

"Lisa."

"Lisa. I like the sound of that." He walked back and forth from the bay window to the folding desk he had set up to work on. His black hair had the quality of always looking wind-tossed and he wore soft white shirts open at the neck. He said, "I've talked to the cook. Effie, isn't that her name? Effie's got a good-for-nothing husband to support, and rheumatism that starts bothering her about this time of the year. She's never had anything and can't think of anything she wants for herself. It's funny. Everybody here is so satisfied and so darn peaceful."

"You're a famous playwright, Mr. Bradford. Aren't you satisfied?"

He laughed boisterously until he saw Lisa looking at him with serious brown eyes. Then he said, "You stare at me as though you think I'm quite mad. Is that what you think?"

"No," Lisa answered evenly, "but Effie thinks you're crazy."

She thought he might be angry but he only laughed again. "See," he said, "how wonderful it would be to be Effie! If she meets someone she can't understand, she can say he's crazy and forget him. But I . . . I meet someone, and I have to probe into him, find out all about everything he does and why . . . and for no sensible reason in the world, except that maybe some day I might put him in a play."

There were many days when he wanted to talk endlessly—about himself, about his work and about New York. Then there were times when he wanted to be alone and they tip-toed around the house, trying to keep out of his sight. And suddenly, after one of the silent periods, he'd come out to the kitchen porch and have dinner with them.

Mark met him one night when he came over for dinner and Bradford suddenly emerged from the study in a shabby, many-hued dressing gown that meant he'd been working steadily since morning. Lisa could see that Mark would automatically disapprove of a man who could make his living sitting at home in a dressing gown. Later that evening, when she and Mark were walking along the dirt road down to the river, he said Bradford was a worse fool than the stories he'd heard about him.

"What are they saying about Mr. Bradford?" Lisa's voice held a touch of defiance.

"They think he must be either crooked or eccentric, but the common opinion is that he's hiding out, since he never comes to town. Nobody in Willow Fork approves of you taking him into your house, Lisa."

Her anger flared swiftly then. "Well, it's nobody's business in Willow Fork or Feather River either," she flung at him. "He rented the house and I'm staying there as a housekeeper. I even had Effie practically move in, just because of talk. I don't see what else I can do!"

"Darling," he said, "you must be prepared for gossip if you're going to do things that are out of the ordinary."

"Has he convinced you already that he's so brilliant?"

"Oh, Mark," she said helplessly, "do we have to quarrel about everything lately?" They were at the end of the little road and she sat on the old wooden bench that faced the river. Mark sat beside her and put his arm around her.

"Honey, I don't want to quarrel, but it puts me in a funny position; the girl I intend to marry keeping house for another man. Everybody wonders why we don't get married."

Lisa looked up at his strong young face and his narrow, light eyes that were staring sulkily out over the water. "Would you really like to get married right away, Mark?"

His arm tightened. "The minute you say so, I've still got that little house in Willow Fork all set. Lisa, how about it?"

"I've been thinking, Mark," Lisa said slowly, looking down at her hands in her lap. "Lately I've thought a lot about all the good times we had in high school and later on . . ."

"We always had fun," he said. "I remember the first night I took you out, when you were supposed to have a date with Harry Woods . . ."

He smiled at the memory. I knew you were the girl for me the first night I saw you at that dance. I didn't waste any time."

"And I liked you because you were the football hero. The other girls envied me." She was silent a moment. "Since then we've had about as smooth running a courtship as anybody ever had . . . until now."

"Sure," he answered swiftly. "Nothing ever came between us until you had to get those ideas about going to New York and then renting out the house, when you know darn well you don't have to support yourself . . ."

She didn't seem to hear him. "I remember all the school parties and the moonlight swimming in Feather River and the first night you kissed me, on a sleigh ride. Everybody thought it was a perfect romance, your family, my family . . ." Then she took his hand. "But you see, Mark, our love never had any test. Everything was too easy."

"What are you driving at?" he demanded, suddenly suspicious of her mellow mood.

"Only this, Mark. This difference that's come up is the first thing we've ever disagreed on. How this all comes out will decide everything."

"Listen," he said, "this sounds like something you've been hearing from that phony playwright."

"Don't be silly, Mark. I never talk about you to him!"

"I wouldn't be surprised if he was trying to cut me out! Go ahead and say it, maybe I am jealous of him!"

Lisa's throat was tight with the tension of trying to explain. "Mark," she pleaded, "don't you see? Our love has never had a test. This'll be a good time to see what it's made of. If this turns out all right, we can be sure we love each other."

He didn't understand and he was angry, so that when they reached his car parked by the side of the house, he drove off without saying when he would see her again. In spite of herself, she felt lonely when he was gone. As she stood on the porch steps on the edge of the moonlight, listening to the soft night wind in the trees, she felt really alone.

Up in her room, she lay in bed, sleepless, staring at the bright moonlight and listening to Bradford play the phonograph on the porch. He was playing the same soft record over and over. "Sometimes I'm happy, sometimes I'm blue. My disposition depends on you. I never mind the clouds in the sky. I'm happy when I'm with you."

A shower of tiny pebbles spattered against her open window and flew into the room. She jumped out of bed. Bradford was standing in the yard, grinning up. "There's a full moon tonight," he said. "Won't you come down and dance with me? I'm lonely."

She was stern. "Mr. Bradford, it's after midnight and you're keeping us all awake. You'd better go to bed."

Then she closed her window almost all the way down and frowned as she got back into bed. But when she went to sleep she was humming "Sometimes I'm happy . . . Sometimes I'm blue-oo . . ."

Lisa missed Mark during the next two weeks more than she wanted to admit. She realized how accustomed she was to depending on his self-assurance and business knowledge—as well as his affection. Life with a famous playwright was never easy and she began to feel that she would never come anywhere near understanding John Bradford. Everything was fine when he was happy, but these days he was so seldom happy, for the new play was not going well.

The morning after her quarrel with Mark, when her nerves and temper were thin-edged she came into open battle with Bradford, too. During the night Slade's cough had become serious, and Effie was busy fixing a poultice for him. Lisa got Bradford's breakfast and carried it up to him. It was 9 o'clock, for he had ordered his breakfast sent up at exactly the same time every morning.

When she knocked there was no sound at all in the room. She shifted the tray to her other arm and knocked louder. She was sure he was awake, for just a few minutes ago she'd seen cigarette smoke drifting through the curtains at his window. Finally she pushed open the door. Bradford was sitting with his head tilted back and his eyes half-closed against the sun as he stared moodily at the hawthorne tree in bloom in the yard.

Lisa said "Here's your breakfast, Mr. Bradford."

She thought he wasn't going to answer until he turned suddenly with a heavy scowl, as though he had just realized that she was there. He sat up straight in bed and pointed accusingly at the tray. "Take that thing out of here and stay out until I call you! Breakfast! What do I want with breakfast! All night I've lain awake . . . groping, praying for an idea. And just as the first thin threads of a thought start forming . . . you come in with breakfast!"

Lisa said, "Don't shout so," and set the tray down on a table.

He glared at her. "Can't you understand I don't want food? Get out of here!"

"Mr. Bradford, Lisa snapped, "I'm sick and tired of your histrionics. If you wouldn't try so hard to act like a temperamental playwright all the time you might write better plays."

"What do you know about my plays?" he bellowed. "You never even read one."

Thomas Wolfe's Mother, 83, Relives Author's Life

By Genevieve Reynolds

"Tom could talk when he was 1 year old. At the age of 2 he was reading. Often he would point to a picture in a book and say, "Read about this," said Mrs. Julia Elizabeth Wolfe, as we sat talking about her famous son, the late Thomas Wolfe, author of "Look Homeward Angel," "Of Time and the River" and other numerous literary works of note.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"Mr. Wolfe,, Tom's father, was so excited when his 9-month-old son said 'moo.' That was Tom's first word," she continued. "But I told Mr. Wolfe there was no reason to get upset, babies had to learn to talk some way, and imitating animals was not unusual."

Thus in a calm, well modulated voice, Mrs. Wolfe talked easily and proudly about her Tom. Her conversation was sprinkled with references to Ben, Frank, Fred, Mary and Mabel, her other children. Nevertheless her small, light brown eyes with their clear, piercing qualities, grew softer as she reminisced about her baby, Tom. Interviewed at the home of her daughter Mabel, Mrs. Ralph H. Wheaton, 3612 Macomb Street Northwest, she sat erectly in a straight-back chair, with her hands quietly folded in her lap.

Few Streaks of Gray

Despite her 83 years of age, her light-brown hair has few if any streaks of gray. It is short and permanented. She wore a black tailored suit with a ruffled pongee blouse. Agile and active, she still rides New York subways alone, yet back in her home in Asheville, N. C., her children won't let her cross the streets without assisting her. Furthermore, she is planning to return home by bus. She's much too thrifty to spend money on a pullman. Incidentally, the children don't try to change her mind, they know her determination.

Further evidences of her thrift came out when I was talking with her. "I just ate a big, heavy lunch," she remarked. (It was 4 p. m. then.) "I can't eat much more today. It would be much better if I were going to a dinner party at the Shoreham some other night instead of the party scheduled for tonight. I hate for people to pay for food that can't all be eaten."

She will tell you that Tom always was studious, his grades excellent. In fact, she taught him herself and he was so much farther advanced than other students in the school which he entered later in the season that he didn't have to study. Instead he read books from the library.

"You don't have to have college training to write good books,' explained Mrs. Wolfe. "I tell my son Frank, who never makes a grammatical error that he ought to follow Tom's example and write. Tom would have written had he never seen a college."

'Letters to His Mother'

She recalled that many able men and women in the South had been deprived of formal education due to the extreme poverty brought on by the Civil War. Yet, these people of good background educated themselves. Private schools were expensive and there was not enough money to send the children to Europe to study—and that the talents and native intelligence did not deteriorate. Proof of this is seen in the children, who when given the opportunities, make high grades and great achievements. Not only was this the case in her own life but true about many other families.

"No, Tom didn't work his way through school," she explained, when asked about that point. "Mr. Wolfe paid his way through the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and I paid his expenses through Harvard."

Remembering that as a bride, she had the prettiest house in Asheville, N. C., she declared that her husband was an excellent provider, a first-r... businessman who paid cash for everything. It was after his death that the family had financial reverses. Interrupting this part of the story, she inquired, "Have you read any of Tom's books?" Getting my affirmative answer, she stood up and walked over to a table and handed me a copy of his new book, "Thomas Wolfe's Letters to His Mother," published May 3 by Charles Scribner's Sons.

"This picture doesn't look much like me," she stated, "do you think? It is reproduced from a painting by Constant van de Wall, and I don't see where it looks like me."

Keen of mind, with a phenomenal, photographic memory, Mrs. Wolfe greets you with a firm, friendly handclasp. She sizes you up immediately, then decides whether she likes you or not. Her capable-looking hands usually stay folded when she talks—she does not gesticulate meaninglessly.

In fact, her calm face, with its thin lips, shows a great serenity of spirit and inner confidence.

Sure of herself, proud and capable, she admits no man or woman as her better. "People sometimes say to me, 'You are not a social climber,' " explained Mrs. Wolfe.

" 'Humph!' to that I always reply, 'No. Why should I be? I am at the top now — always have been.' "

Holds Dignity and Poise

Again referring to Tom, she said: "Always I had faith in him and his ability to write. Not only was he a good writer, but an excellent speaker. He won all the declamation prizes in school. Yet I have never realized that he was grown—always he was my baby."

After Thomas Wolfe's untimely death at the age of 37 his mother continued to run the Old Kentucky Home, a one-time boarding house that later was turned into a tourist home. Since gas rationing, the tourist trade has dropped off, but students, artists, writers—all disciples of Tom—continue to visit her. In that family house, she holds court—always she is the queen—with the followers and admirers. She encourages them in their creative efforts—"just like Tom would do if he were here," she explained.

She enjoys the limelight and likes people. She is a good judge of them. However, no matter how great or small, she never loses her dignity and poise.

Son Influenced by Mother

Her devotion and faith in her son influenced his life, both literary and personal.

Here is one more insight into her's and Tom's character. Both were in Washington at the time the suffragettes paraded to the White House. As the feminists passed, Mrs. Wolfe said to Tom, "Son, go get me a banner, I am going to march with the women."

"No, no, mother," quickly answered Tom, "don't make yourself conspicuous," he begged. The 6-year-old son won his point. But that didn't mean she gave up her fight for women to vote."

"Tom knew Washington well," she added, "we came to Washington to see Theodore Roosevelt inauguarated the first time. The second inuagurgation, Tom wanted to pay $25 for a seat for me to see the President. But that was throwing away money. I took my own barrel and camp stool."

Reluctantly, I said goodby to Julia Elizabeth Wolfe.

Rugged Individualist From the Southwest Gives His Opinion of Man Who Believes His Children Are Infinitely Superior to Other People's Brats

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have never written you before, although I am a daily reader of your column and a great admirer of your wisdom and the good advice you give your correspondents. Moreover, I marvel at your patience and your keen sense of humor. This epistle is prompted by the letter signed "P. H. D.," which you published without comment on Tuesday, May 4, under the heading,—"Man fortunate in having two civilized children says it's waste of breath to try to tell the average low-bred parents how to make their brats behave."

I will lay you a bet, 5 to 1, that P. H. D. is of German extraction and married to a rich woman. His arrogance reveals his Teutonic background, which, as we know, is characterized by almost total lack of understanding of life and people. P. H. D. probably got his doctor's degree from some European university and that academic achievement has gone to his head. I will wager also that he couldn't make a living if he had to; but that through his wife's money or other influence, he got a "connection" with Government service. Somebody,—I believe it was Roger Babson,—once observed: "If you can't think for yourself, join the Army or get a job with the Government; then all you have to do is what you are told to do."

Nation Was Built By Plain People

P. H. D. is probably one of the long-haired theorists busy nowadays trying to tinker with the machinery of our democratic form of government,—a job for which a thoroughgoing snob and pedigreed moron is scarcely qualified. I would like to take P. H. D. out to the great Southwest (where I come from), and put him to work on an oil derrick and let him meet some of the rugged individualists whose hard work and horse sense built this country up to its present position as the greatest nation in the world, and forged a political system that gives nincompoops like him an opportunity to survive by feeding on its Federal payroll.

This country being only 150 years old, and his highfalutin ancestry dating back 900 years, according to his statement,—so that in breeding and "superior" instinct he holds himself and his offspring to be about 1000 years ahead of the average American,—I suggest that he pack up and go back to the home of his ancestors and stay there. The United States of America can get along very well without the patronage of people of his ilk. Yours very truly,

T. A. D.

Noble Flavor Lost To P. H. D.'s Breed

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I generally read in serious vein your timely articles, which seem invariably to hit the proverbial nail on the head. But this morning I laughed out loud at the letter from "P. H. D." His contribution struck me as the all-time tops in snobbish, smug and puffed-up bombast. As a raconteur, he is a dead-ringer for the doting parent in the old joke books, whose favorite theme was the wonderful exploits and bright sayings of "our" superior children. And he, this P. H. D., attributes the superman qualities of his offspring to simon-pure blue-blood breeding dating back 900 years,—back to and beyond the days of the knightly Don Quixote, whose mission in life was to defend the downtrodden and magnanimously help them rise.

It looks as if, somewhere along the line, P. H. D.'s illustrious breed had panned the milk of human kindness out of its knightly veins,—so that all they have left are those aristocratic arched nostrils, which sniff disdainfully at the vulgar herd they must now perforce contact in this noisome world of crude mannered common people. While all of us must agree that lack of proper parental discipline and petty neighborhood squabbles are part of the picture of free-spirited America, we also see that this live-and-let-live system has produced,—and will continue to produce,—many fine, adult and outstandingly humane characters, with minds which magnificently transcend the sometimes squalid circumstances and want of "tradition" of their earlier years.

BRITISH-AMERICAN.

Best Be Themselves And Forget Pedigree

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a constant reader of your helpful column and have marveled at the way you can take a situation apart; and find just the right words to say what you think about it. Therefore, I was greatly surprised when you published "P. H. D.'s" letter on Tuesday without a peep. I am so convinced that something should have been said that I can't refrain from writing. Mr. D. impressed me as being so much in love with Mr. D. that he can't see beyond the end of his nose.

The principal impression I got from his letter was that in his five years' residence in Washington his friends have been few and indifferent; with the result that he has assuaged his hurt feelings by assuming that he is much too good for them. If Mr. D. and his wife would forget their family tradition, their superior intelligence, their courtly manners and their 900 years' recorded pedigree and try to get people to accept them on the basis of themselves alone, they would find little occasion to level the finger of bitter scorn at surly neighbors and their ill-bred children.

As for his Chesterfield-model son Roderick, let's hope the lad doesn't grow up to sound any more priggish and overbearing than he sounds now,—according to papa's quotes. Sometime, some brat or moron (to use two of papa's favorite terms for the neighbors' children), is going to knock the stuffing out of Roderick; and thereby do him the favor that papa overlooked,—namely: remove all trace of papa's lordly, self-satisfied, arched eyebrow expression and make him a nicer person to know. Sincerely,

J. B. L.

Says Son Seems Almost As Priggish as Father

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: That stinging wit, Dorothy Parker, shot her bolt prematurely when she reviewed a bad book with the simple, clinical comment: "Tonstant weader frowed up." She should have saved it for the gent with the 900-year-old name and his precocious offspring, Roderick, who is so stuffy at the age of 5 that he is nearly as nauseating as his old man. From the viewpoint of public interest, it is unfortunate that the famliy, amid its preoccupation with good breeding, found the time and inclination to breed.

Top O' the Morning!

by Jeanne Contini

This is the gal who not only gets the job but holds it. You can almost tell by the way she steps off the elevator that she means business as early as 8 o'clock a. m.

For shaking off the yawn brought on by an early morning heat wave, we nominate this suit. It's made of spun cotton, looks like linen, and is show-red with small white dots. The jacket is bound in silky white braid and has white buttons. The skirt is pleated in the front only and seems to have a stern resistance to wrinkles. Wear it either as a dress or a suit with a crisp white gilet. Note the nice shawl collar which is scheduled to back your favorite gadgets as faithfully as Brooklyn backs its Dodgers.

Such a fresh outlook is pretty well guaranteed to wake up the boss as well as yourself. Comes in a number of swell colors . . . we're partial to the red and the navy . . . about $9.00.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Once one accepts the "chores" incident to proper baby rearing, one ceases to resent them. One accepts the fact that it demands a good portion of the morning or evening to prepare the formula and wash and boil the bottles and nipples and the enormous benefits to the child become obvious, not an enormous "waste" of time.

The preparation of the formula can be made easier if one has proper tools for the job and if enough time is allowed so that one does not grow irritable at the time consumed. When a parent has no help and must perforce be home anyway, the evening is as good a time as any for making of the formula. Daddy may find this an enjoyable job.

If fresh milk is used, then the formula will be made in the morning as soon as possible after the milk is delivered.

For either evaporated or fresh milk, a large porcelain pitcher with the ounces marked on the inside, is a valuable aid in measuring milk or water. A large, full-sized tablespoon is needed for the measurement of the sugar or sirup and a long-handled spoon for stirring. If milk must be boiled a strainer will be desirable.

To boil the bottles one will need a large-sized preserving kettle. A glass with tight-fitting cover can be used for the storage of the cleansed nipples and there should be a bottle and nipple for each feeding of the 24 hours and a few extra in case of breakage. Since rubber caps for bottles are no longer available generally, one can use the nipple itself for stoppering the bottle and cover this with a clean paper fastened down with a rubber band.

Dust, you must know, is one of those agents for the dissemination of infections of the mouth, to which the baby must not be exposed. It's a small thing, but one which must be taken into account.

As each bottle is emptied by baby it should be rinsed well in cold water and filled with water until the time for washing arrives. Wash them all at once in hot, soapy water with a bottle brush. Rinse and put in a kettle of cold water and bring to a boil. A little vinegar in the water will prevent the formation of crusts on the bottle. Dip out, empty and place on a clean cloth until time to fill. Once filled, they must go into the coldest portion of the ice box or refrigerator (barring freezing) and remain there until time to be heated at feeding time.

It's About Time

By Dolores Boland

IT'S ABOUT TIME to check all of your old spring clothes and decide which can be rejuvenated and put to use. Give away at once those which you will not wear. Do not let them lie around till the end of the season 'cause someone could be getting much use from them.

Soldiers Become Housekeeping Conscience

Women may have to look to their laurels as housekeepers when the war is over. Millions of servicemen are becoming so expert in household matters that they are likely to come home prepared to tell the little woman how to dust, clean and wash clothes.

Ordinary housework should be easy for the man who has helped to "keep house" on a crowded Army transport where the troops eat, sleep and work in close quarters. Absolute cleanliness and order are essential if they are to be comfortable and reach their destination in good health. Army men soon learn not to sweep dust and litter under the bunks nor to attempt last minute tidying up for official inspection. Bunks and barracks must be ready at all times for the sanitary inspector's eagle eye.

Life in the Navy also presents many opportunities for a man to pick up the fine points of housework. Navel regulations require that the men keep themselves, their belongings and their surroundings "ship-shape." No home is more thoroughly cleaned than a ship or naval barracks, and "field day" which comes every week in the Navy is the nearest thing to spring and fall cleaning in the home.

Personal habits are likely to change for the better. The man who used to flip cigarette ashes on the living room table, scatter newspapers on the floor and leave his clothes in untidy heaps, wherever he happened to remove them must become a model of tidiness.

Wife of One Presidential Possibility Has No Yen to Be White House Hostess; "Besides, Chance Now Is Too Remote To Think About at All," Says Minnesota's Former First Lady

(This is the last of three stories on the Navy's new Lieut. Comdr. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota and Mrs. Stassen.)

"I'll tell you one thing—she's a mighty good soldier."

At his desk in the Minnesota State Capitol, Harold E. Stassen was speaking . . . about his wife, as you may have guessed. She was coming in to have luncheon with him on the last day he served as Governor. She was not a habitual interview-giver, but if I cared to talk with her it might be arranged.

I cared, and I did; and when I left the office later, I took with me the very definite impression that in the case of Mrs. Stassen, at least, the time-worn tag "good soldier" has a new and significant meaning.

Modest, self-effacing, her sphere of interests revolving around her husband, children and home, she declined to bid for sympathy even though that world was to crack at its foundation the following day.

"I don't think any of us should think of ourselves in a time like this," she said. "Since my husband feels he should go into uniform, I know my part is to stay here and look after the house and the children. My mother and sister will live with me. His mother and father are only a 5-minute drive away. I'll be all right."

"It's All Out of Our Hands Now"

Although the Great Lakes Navy Training School is not far from St. Paul, she was making no definite plans to visit her husband there. "If he has any time off, I may take the children down for a brief stay," she said. "But we aren't counting on that. When he leaves St. Paul tomorrow, we may not see him again until the war's over."

The latter part of this month will find Lieutenant Commander Stassen on his way to Fort Schuyler, N. Y., where he will take his indoctrination course. After that? Nobody knows. Like every other devoted wife, Esther Glewwe Stassen is probably keeping her fingers crossed, hoping her own special hero won't be sent too far away. But she won't talk about that. Not even for a minute. "It's all entirely out of our hands now," she said in a tone of resignation that dismissed the subject.

Of her husband's many accomplishments in public office, she never tires of talking. She has followed his career step by step since high school days, and at one time took quite an active part in helping to promote it.

The Stassen and Glewwe families were friends of long-standing, even before Esther and Harold started keeping company. Everybody concerned seemed to take it as a matter of course that when young Stassen made up his mind to be a lawyer, Esther signed up for legal secretarial studies as soon as she finished high school. When he set up law offices in Dakota County, she took over as secretary; but she bowed out of that part of the picture as soon as he became Governor.

A self-confessed "homebody," she frankly admits she is happy her office-working days are over. "With two children and a house to look after, I don't have much time for anything else," she said. "You see, I'm not one of those clever women who can successfully manage both a household and a career."

She is proud of her English-style dwelling, overlooking the Mississippi, located in the stockyards town of South St. Paul. She has a maid, but does most of the cooking herself. She has no secretary, but tries to answer every letter addressed to her. Friday is her day "at home." She does little entertaining otherwise.

Among her many experiences as Minnesota's First Lady, one of the most amusing—well, amusing in retrospect, anyway—was back in May, 1939, when she and the Governor were asked to meet King George and Queen Elizabeth of England in Winnipeg, Canada. An invitation to the reception for Their Majesties was issued by Mayor of Winnipeg John Queen. The Stassens accepted; the Governor packed his best suit; Mrs. Stassen bought a natty new outfit, and the two took off to Canada.

MRS. HAROLD E. STASSEN

Received with suitable fanfare by the mayor, they were among those present at the mammoth reception at which several hundred guests formed in line, according to instructions, to curtsey to His Britannic Majesty and the Queen. But not the Stassens. They didn't have the chance. As the queue moved slowly toward the King and Queen, an equerry approached the Governor and his wife, curtly demanded their credentials, examined same, and then requested them to step out of line. A note was hastily dispatched to Premier Bracken in the front of the chamber, but one of his aides laid it aside with an air of finality.

A Governor of less wisdom and more hankering for sensational headlines than Stassen would have made an international incident out of that.

"Forget it," was what he said when he and wife returned home. "We have no comment, and we hope nothing further will be made of the incident."

Both realized that the slight was not as intentional as it seemed on the surface; that they were victims of petty political rivalries and jealousies among Canadian officials, complicated diplomatic red tape and the jittery bungling of provincial brass hats.

Like her husband, Mrs. Stassen declined to dilate on the possibility that they might ever live at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. "The chance is so remote," she said. "More remote now than ever," she added.

Even so, did the thought that she might one day be First Lady appeal to her at all? "I can't say it does," she replied with a smile. "But of course that doesn't make any difference. You see, I'm not the one to be considered in connection with the White House."

If she should become First Lady, however, she would be about as much a contrast to Eleanor Roosevelt as anyone you can imagine. Quite definitely, she is the stay-at-home type. She makes speeches only on the rarest occasions. Her writing for publication has been limited to a single newspaper story, "My Week," appearing in the St. Paul Pioneer Press a couple of years ago. She is reserved; leaves most of the talking to her husband. But when she does express an opinion, it bears weight; is wise, to the point, and neatly pared of all extraneous detail.

Even in the White House, her interests probably would revolve around her husband; their son, Glen, and their small daughter, Kathleen. She is decidedly domestic; by her own admission, "just a homebody." But don't get the wrong impression from that; for the "just" doesn't belong there. She is a lot more than just that.

The sun shone on a perfect May day yesterday to welcome President Enrique Penaranda of Bolivia, who arrived in Washington for his first visit to the National Capital.

David Torro, former President of Bolivia; Vice President Henry Wallace; the Speaker of the House, Sam Rayburn; the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull; the Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau; the Secretary of the Navy, Col. Frank Knox; the Secretary of Commerce, Jesse Jones; the Secretary of Agriculture, Claude Wickard; Senator Tom Connally, Senator Warren R Austin, Representative Sol Bloom, Representative Charles A. Eaton, Marvin McIntyre, and Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles; the Undersecretary of War, Robert P. Patterson; Admiral William D. Leahy, Admiral Ernest J. King, Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb.

Rowe, Prentiss M. Brown, Chester Davis, Byron Price, Philip Bonsal, Stanley Woodward, Brig. Gen. James H. Walker, Military Aide to President Penaranda; Capt. Albert E. Schrader. Naval Aide to the visiting President, and Lieut. Col. Chester Hammond.

Luncheon and Dinner Today

The program of entertainment arranged in honor of the distinguished visitor includes a dinner this evening to be given by Secretary of State Cordell Hull at the Carlton Hotel; a luncheon today at the Pan American Union following a special meeting of the board of governors; a dinner tomorrow evening when Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle, jr. will be host, and a large reception on Saturday afternoon at the Pan American Union to be given by the Bolivian Ambassador and Senora de Guachalla.

At the luncheon at the Pan American Union today the red, green and gold of Bolivia's flag will be fashioned of flowers for the table centerpiece.

Bolivia's flag and coat of arms were adopted when the country won its independence in 1825 through the famous liberators, Gen. Simon Bolivar and General Sucre. Uniquely, the colors woven into the national banner represent the country's resources, the upper red stripe denoting the animal kingdom, of which the alpaca is the symbol; the middle gold stripe, the traditional mineral wealth of Bolivia; and the lower green stripe, the vegetable kingdom, represented by wheat and breadfruit.

In the high country of La Paz, the presidential home of General Penaranda, the queer-looking alpacas, with long strands of black or white wool hanging almost to the ground, signify not only one of the most valuable resources of the country, but its ancient Incan culture as well, a proud heritage of Bolivians.

Tin Comes From Potosi

Fabulous "old Potosi," whose once enormously rich silver mines are now chiefly turning out humble tin substance for vital war supplies, is signified in the gold stripe of Bolivia's flag. Because the towering mountain crest of Potosi once lured in Spanish colonial days great streams of Spanish and Indian adventurers and explorers up its narrow trails, and silver dust was cheaper in the markets of the little dobe towns than eggs and flour, Potosi will perhaps forever be a monument to the legendary wealth of Bolivia's minerals.

More substantial, but nonetheless romantic, is the significance of the vegetable kingdom of Bolivia in the green stripe of its flag, because of the unusual conditions surrounding the growing of agricultural products in that country.

Around Lake Titicaca, the highest steam-navigated lake in the world, wheat is being grown in thousands of acres under government subsidy, and the primitive production which existed at the time Bolivia's flag was adopted lends even greater romance to the fact that it should have been symbolized in the nation's colors.

Virginian Given Merit Award For Action in North Africa

Col. Frederick W. Okie, jr., Well Known In Capital; Sister Lives Here

The family and friends of Lieut. Col. Frederick W. Okie, jr., now on duty with the United States Army in North Africa, are proud of the latest news of the former Virginia farmer and horseman.

According to an announcement by the War Department, Lieut. Col. Okie has been awarded the Legion of Merit by General Eisenhower, for valourous action under fire. Established by an executive order in November, 1942, the Legion of Merit stems from the Badge for Military Merit, America's oldest decoration, originated by George Washington in 1782. As was the case with the original decoration, the present one is awarded for "extraordinary fidelity and essential service."

A resident of Piedmont Farm in Marshall, Fauquier County, Va., the young officer is the son of Mrs. Houston Gaddis and the late Frederick Okie of Washington. His sister, Mrs. Gibbs Baker, now lives in Washington, and his wife, the former Miss Opal Parker Cain, and their two children are making their home in Somerset, Ky. for the duration.

Colonel Okie is serving with the Transportation Service Forces in North Africa. Exemplifying how the work of the supply and service branches parallels the activities of the fighting arms in this war, his citation states:

Reentered Enemy Lines After Retreat

"For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performing of outstanding services during the period February 16 to 18, 1942, Lieut. Col. Okie organized and led a detachment of his battalion beyond our own lines to the vicinity of Moulares, Tunisia, to attempt to bring out two trains of ammunition which had been abandoned after a rapid enemy advance. When enemy forces closed in and made movement to the trains into our lines impossible, he supervised the destruction of the locomotives, assembled his detachment and a number of civilian refugees and led them all to safety by a circuitous route through the desert to Tebessa.

"Working to the last minute, the Colonel barely got out of one town as German tanks entered from the opposite side. Racing along in two trucks loaded with his crew, he was fired upon pointblank by an antitank gun, but managed to get into mountainous country, where he drove up the bank of a dry river bed, escaped with his convoy and disappeared."

Two days later, Colonel Okie had an appointment with a superior officer in a town in Allied territory. Reported as missing, he caused widespread surprise when he turned up on the hour to keep his date.

Has Wide Training In Transportation

Born in Dayton, Ohio, Colonel Okie was brought up on the farm of his parents in Fauquier County, Va. He was graduated from Episcopal High School in Alexandria and from Virginia Military Institute. Appointed a first lieutenant in the Corps of Engineers Reserve in 1933, he was promoted to his present rank in November of last year.

His assignment to the Transportation Corps followed many years of railroad experience. After working summers between school terms as a student apprentice with the Southern Railway, he continued with the road upon graduation from V. M. I. in 1929. The next year he was made assistant trainmaster at Somerset, Ky., and in 1933 was made trainmaster with headquarters in Birmingham, Ala.

In 1938 he was made superintendent of the Mobile Division of the Southern at Selma, Ala., returning to Birmingham later that year as superintendent, a position he held until going into the Army.

Colonel Okie's father was a farmer and horse breeder in Virginia and founder of the Cobbler Hunt. The colonel himself is an excellent horseman and hunter and is widely known in northern Virginia.

Patricia Prochnik, who looks after the entertainment for the dances, promises several good features for this evening's dance. There will be a door prize for officers, one for the ladies, this feature having worked out very well at previous dances.

There's always a snack during the evening, the music is tops, and young officers on duty, or here on leave, are enthusiastic about the dances. As is the custom, no tickets may be secured at the club. They must be reserved in advance by calling Hobart 6318.

Captured Japanese Films Fan Hot Flames of Anger

Pearl Harbor, Corregidor Through Nip Lenses; 'Skin of Our Teeth' Continues Controversial; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

REGARDLESS OF THE IMPORTANCE, actual or theoretical, of the major screen attractions with which they are being shown, the most arresting items on downtown screens at the moment are the Paramount News clips captured from the Japanese.

TALLULAH BANKHEAD

These are the "enemy-eye" views of Pearl Harbor and the fall of Corregidor. If they won't serve as a stinging spur to this country's will to win, nothing will—especially since by Tokyo's insolent and inhuman admission it has become known to the American people what happens to captives of war at the murderous hands of the Japanese in certain circumstances.

These captured film footages, never meant for American eyes, are not so very long, but they are long enough to sell an imposing amount of war bonds and envelop in crimson shame those who would impede the war effort to achieve selfish and vainglorious personal ends.

What is confidently expected will be the most interesting of the film series being sponsored by the United Nations Club, will be Sunday night's seventh program at Hotel 2400, to be run off beginning at 7:15 o'clock. "March of the United Nations," pictured in Technicolor, will be presented for the first time, with Shostakovitch's "Seventh Symphony" the key to its nature. Cecil B. De Mille's "Cavalcade of America," enlisting the services of hundreds of stars in a film of sheer inspiration, also will be presented as part of the United Nations Club's first completely American evening. And as a "teaser" there will be a "Sneak Preview" so unusual that the nature of its subject is a closely guarded secret. Brig. Gen. H. L. George, the Hon. Joseph R. Farrington, delegate from Hawaii, and Representative Sol Bloom will be the guests of honor on this strictly red-white-and-blue occasion.

Only One Was Unfit!

After discussing with this department likely things to see during a brief show-shopping spree in New York, Mr. Gerard Hubbard, 614 Greenbrier Drive, Silver Spring, Md., compiled himself a very nice list of footlight objectives. By concentrated and unswerving devotion to the purpose of his Broadway junket, he saw over one weekend, "The Patriots," "Life With Father," "Lady in the Dark," "Dark Eyes" and "The Skin of Our Teeth." His promised report on his findings boils over with superlatives for every play he saw—but one.

That one was Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth." We had warned Mr. Hubbard that he either would like this one tremendously or not at all and had expressed an eager curiosity to find out which. He left scant room for doubt.

"Last on any list, this year or any other. Atrocious, unthinkable . . . This play is time wasted for everybody, both sides of the orchestra pit. It violates all rules of the drama (not a bad idea) but violates them badly. It's sophomoric, inane, disjointed, boring. It has no appeal whatever, heart or mind. Tallulah Bankhead would do well to quit it. So would everyone else."

It was on the day Mr. Hubbard's letter was received—and it by no means expresses an isolated point of view, not, however, including our own—that announcement was made that "The Skin of Our Teeth" had been awarded the Pulitzer Prize as the best American play of the year!

The Washington Workshop for Government Agencies offers the reminder that those tryouts for parts in "It's Up to You," the Department of Agriculture-Arthur Arent-Earl Robinson theatricalization of the food problem, are still being held tonight and tomorrow night in the Department of Agriculture Auditorium, South Building, at 8:30. Things are moving along nicely, so I am told.

And that reminds me. Stopping by for a hail-and-farewell at furlough's end, before taking off for his Florida post, Corpl. Leon Askin, former director of the Civic Theater and active in all manner of local stage doings, is still up to his eyes in the same old thing. After months of intensive training as a specialist in Army Air Force operations, it was discovered that Askin knew something about the theater. Just what they needed, opined the high command. So Leon was put in charge of camp stage and screen entertainment and made founder and publisher of a theretofore nonexistent camp newspaper, with immediate promotion to corporal and intimations that shoulder hardware is not out of reach. "The only trouble is," Leon was remarking, "I have no actors in my outfit. Just as soon as an actor joins this man's army, they make him an officer whose first duty is to scurry around and find him some actors!"

After the false hopes aroused by "Oklahoma," we wouldn't be betting too heavily on it for Washington, but the Theater Guild has announced that Robert Edmond Jones has been engaged to design the production of "Othello," which will star Paul Robeson under the direction of Margaret Webster. A road tour is planned for late September or early October.

In-the-Lap-of-Spring Note

Extended Engagement Nearing End

MARIO AND FLORIA

two of Washington's favorite dancers, who tonight bring to a close their most successful local stage engagement at the Earle Theater, where for the past two weeks they have headlined the stage revue presented in conjunction with the screen feature, "Edge of Darkness." Youth, grace and versatility would seem to spell out the secret of their success—if it is a secret

Margo, Leopard Play in the Band

Hollywood.—Margo, returning to the films here after an absence of several years, found herself called on not only to play a featured role but also to help a leopard record the musical score.

Film is RKO Radio's thriller, "The Leopard Man," featuring Jean Brooks and Dennis O'Keefe with the stage star. Her role—the first since "Winterset" and "Lost Horizon"—is that of Clo-Clo, Spanish dancer, complete with castanets.

It's the castanets which Margo plays in the band, so to speak. The musical score will carry throughout an undertone of leopard snarls mingled with the clash of castanets.

Margo did her castanet-clicking on the studio recording stage. Dynamite, the black leopard, more temperamental, was interviewed by a microphone at feeding time in his private zoo.

Rivals Turn Friendly

Humphrey Bogart and Sydney Greenstreet appear together for the third time in Warner Bros. "Casablanca," but for the first time each fails to "pull a gun" on the other.

Saves Soles

Donlevy Deserves Special Attention

Hollywood, Calif., May 5.—When Brian Donlevy finishes in the King Vidor picture, "America," he's going to be one of our biggest stars. I think Paramount, where he's under contract, had better do something about lining up important pictures for him. They have him for very little money on a contract he signed ages ago. Metro-Goldwyn pays him three times as much, and stars him in one of their biggest. Brian and Vidor are back in Chicago now, taking shots for the picture. Brian plays a composite of Carnegie, Ford, Kaiser and Jeffers. If it's half as good as King Vidor's "Big Parade," it will be one of the most important films of the year . . . Nunnally Johnson may sign a long-term deal with David Selznick. It would be nice teaming—they complement each other. Both aim for perfection. David's taken an option on Stephen Longstreet's novel, "The Land I Love." Longstreet wrote "The Gay Sisters," among 17 other novels.

Important Doings

Mary Beth Hughes and Ted North will make it a church wedding May 15. Mary's been signed by Pine and Thomas, and her first for them will be "Timber." Dick Arlen, 20 pounds lighter, looks so well he may inherit some of the Alan Ladd roles. Dick's never lost his fan following . . . Only natural that Mary Pickford and John Charles Thomas should appear on the Mother's Day program, 'cause mother wasn't just a word to them . . . The Jed Harrises had a baby girl. They've named her Abbie. Had it been a boy, it would have been Abie. Knowing Jed, she'll probably be called "Gabby." Jed's gone to Palm Springs to recupe.

You'll Be Seeing Them

"Lady of Burlesque" rested squarely on Barbara Stanwyck's shoulders. At times she seemed to sag a bit from its weight.. But it will clean up at the boxoffice. Hunt Stromberg mighty wise signing up Victoria Faust. She's got what it takes . . . Cary Grant's "Mr. Lucky" entertaining, with Cary's charm shining through him. Laraine Day's mighty good, too. The best scene, however, was between Vladimir Sokoloff, as a Greek priest, and Cary. Sokoloff's superb . . . Billy Wilder back from New York with James Cain's "Double Indemnity" ready for production. No, it's not about war, but a thriller murder mystery. Incidentally, the Cain's divorce is being handled very quietly.

The Lowest Low

I've heard of men so mean, they'd steal candy from a baby, but I believe this thief stands alone. At the Fine Arts Theater, Cathedral films were making "Journey Into Faith," which they were doing in black and white, except for Dr. James Fredericks, who's head of Cathedral films. He was photographing it in color, using his own camera, which he bought in Alexandria, Egypt, to photograph the Holy Land. Dr. Fredericks was going to use his colored pictures in Sunday schools throughout the country. They had just finished photographing the crucifixion, and Sidney Christy, the man who portrayed Christ, had said, "Forgive them, for they know not what they do." Dr. Fredericks put down his camera for a few moments to speak to Sidney, and when he turned around to get it, it had been stolen.

His "Other" Suit

Van Johnson left the hospital yesterday dressed in his new suit. He'll convalesce at the Keenan Wynn's home until he's well enough to finish "A Guy Named Joe." He bears quite a few scars on his forehead from the accident and brain operation. They can be covered up by make-up. When he regained consciousness his second question was, "What suit was I wearing?" When told it was a gabardine, he said, "Okay, I was scared I'd been wearing my new suit." He's such a nice kid—I'm sure every one's rejoicing at his quick recovery . . . Oscar Homolka back from the East, and while he played Litvinoff in "Mission to Moscow," he hadn't seen it.

Power of Suggestion

Young Bill Carter, who's working with Charlie Coburn in "Without Notice," starts scratching his head every time he watches Coburn. Finally discovered why he was doing it. Seems when he was in North Africa, last film he saw was "The Devil and Miss Jones," with Coburn. While he watched, fleas were biting him, so he kept on scratching. He couldn't perchance think of Charlie as a flea, could he? Edmund Lowe and Evelyn Keyes have been set at Columbia for "Restless Lady" . . . Reason Lady Korda can't do "Cry Havoc" is because she has to finish "Attack by Night" at Columbia . . . Lieut. Col. John L. Chennault, son of the famous Flying Tiger, who's been stationed in the Aleutians, stopped over two days in our village. He was entertained by Edgar Bergen and Ray Noble.

Now They're Talking

Michael Todd is whipping up a new musical with a Mexican locale for Zorina Bill Gaxton and Victor Moore. Todd has the New York hit, "Something for the Boys," and Zorina deserves a good show . . . Jackie Cooper and Jean Horne, daughter of former director, have it bad . . . Loretta Young took out her grass and put in lettuce. First lettuce lawn in town. All she needs now are bunnies. Bill Holden left pictures to go into the Army. Now Lieut. Bill Holden is helping produce "The Army Hour" . . . Jean Lorraine of Lorraine and Rognan (he died at Lisbon), is back here resting until Paramount's ready for her . . . Leonard Sillman's searching small theater talent. He signed up 18-year-old Marnin Thrasher at La Jolla, also a team of colored dancers for "New Faces" . . . Bob Benchley's whacking out three scrips for shorts about present-day life in Washington, D. C.

Soldiers' Chorus

Capital Youngster Is On the Way Up

Hollywood, May 5 (INS).—Twentieth Century-Fox is not foolish enough to make any boasts that it has another Shirley Temple in 12-year-old Peggy Ann Garner. There is only one Shirley. But about $2,000,000 worth of story properties, originally bought for the little Temple, and which have been gathering dust since her departure, are being revamped for Peggy Ann. You will remember her as Roddy McDowall's sister in "Pied Piper," and the youngster is coming up in "Jane Eyre" and "Heaven Can Wait."

GREER GARSON

First of the Temple properties she inherits is "Lady Jane," the child classic by C. B. Jamison. Then there is "The Little Diplomat," by Charles Belden and "Broadway Baby," by Rion James.

Feli Franchelli, the only important Filipino actress to date and the darling of her native Philippines, made a test for an important role in "Cry Havoc" that has M-G-M winging. Richard Thorpe says Miss Franchelli is just plain "marvelous." And before you start pointing out to me that there was only a small part for a Filipino girl in the original stage show, let me say the play has undergone a rewriting job and that this role now is an important one.

Very interesting, I think, to learn that Feli is the wife of Col. Howard Hunter, now with the American Medical Corps in Africa. She is brilliantly educated, having attended both U. S. C. and L. S. U. in this country.

I happen to know that although "Mrs. Miniver" won Greer Garson her greatest fame and an academy Oscar, it was not her favorite role. True, she met Richard Ney, who played her 17-year-old son in the movie and later became her fiance in real life. But Greer is actually too young to do these more mature mother roles, and so, as much as I hate to discourage Sam Marx, I don't believe he has a chance of getting her to co-star with Walter Pidgeon in "Yesterday's Children." Sam says he is shooting high because Doris Anderson's script is so good he thinks he has an American "Mrs. Miniver." The book by Lamar Warrick is due on the stands this week.

One 10 per cent commission Ralph Blum of the Feldman-Blum agency will never collect is that of his 11-year-old son. He is to have a real acting part in "The Last Train From Berlin," at Twentieth, and he got it all on his own.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Julie Bishop's chief topic of conversation is Errol Flynn. Yes, she has fallen for him; the birthday gift Lionel Barrymore treasures the most is the yellowed manuscript of one of Strauss' waltzes; Dorothy McGuire received a St. Christopher from David Selznick with "A Safe and Happy Journey to Stardom" inscribed on it. A nice thought and greatly appreciated by the young actress.

Well! Here's a combination—Ann Corio and Maxie Rosenbloom—dining in state at Mike Lyman's; Bonita Granville is being escorted here and there by the well known man-about-town, Jack Taveiman; Rudy Vallee, handsome in uniform, escorting Olive Harris to the officers club at the Beverly Wilshire; Harpo Marx has 10 chickens in his backyard and each is named for a 10 percenter.

City Slickers

"Spike" Jones and his City Slickers, who gained national fame with their recording of "Der Fuehrer's Face," hold down the featured band spot in Warner Bros.' "Thank Your Lucky Stars."

Carves Own Career

who expresses the sound of Katherine, contracted into "Katie," by the initials, is hewing out a bit of a career for herself independent of any aid from her father, the noted director, Sam Wood. Her next on the screen will be "Nine Girls," film version of "This Little Hand," in which she appeared at the National

Czech Govt. Sent 'Hostages' Script

Hollywood.—A copy of the Frank Butler-Lester Cole script for Paramount's "Hostages," picturization of the Stefan Heym best-seller set against a background of occupied Prague and the Czecho-Slovakian underground movement, has been sent to the Czech government in exile, in London, through Consul Bohus Benes in San Francisco, nephew of Premier Eduard Benes. The Czech government has already shown keen interest in the filming.

The picture stars Luise Rainer and Arturo de Cordova, with William Bendix, Paul Lukas, Katina Paxinou, Roland Varno and Mikhail Rasumny heading the supporting cast.

ROBERT PATTERSON: The Truman Committee's report on your dispute with Bill Jeffers will concern itself, in part, with the problem of why public figures waste so much time fighting . . . WILLIAM GOETZ: Isn't your resignation as head of Twentieth Century-Fox tied up with the return of Darryl Zanuck to that post?

*JIMMY BYRNES: E. Ray Goetz, the producer, has had some experiece with inflation. He was in Germany at the height of the inflation of Germany's currency. Goetz, in a Berlin restaurant, tipped the waiter 10,000,000 marks—and the disappointed waiter threw the tip into Goetz' face . . . WILL HAYS: The follow-up indictments in the Bioff-Browne case will be made public this week . . . DONOVAN: In "Desert Victory," only 170 feet of film were inserted and clearly marked as background material. The rest of this exciting movie was filmed in action . . . HOLC: Charles Cotter will be the new regional head for New York State . . . SUMNER WELLES: As long as there are two separate French units fighting on the side of the United Nations, every Hollywood studio has postponed the production of pictures about France . . . FORMER SENATOR JOSH LEE: The last week-end report from Washington was that you will run for the Governorship of Oklahoma and Clyde Herring for the Governorship of Iowa.

THEATER GUILD: Goldwyn saw "Oklahoma" last week. He hadn't heard that the movie offers for the show are so high that the authors first are waiting to see what the new income tax rates will be before considering the sale. Goldwyn told Dick Rodgers, the composer: "I think I know a way how to make a movie out of this" . . . U. M. W.: Undersecretary of the Interior Fortas, who was in the Caribbean on an inspection tour concerning the feeding of the Indies, flew back to Washington last week-end to assist Ickes in the mine dispute . . . ARTHUR WHITESIDE: Senator Maloney is positive that his civilian supply bill will pass this month.

16 Master Switches to Aid Blackout

Correction of one of the most (literally) glaring faults in Washington's blackout technique was promised yesterday when the District Commissioners ordered the District's 34,178 street lights to be controlled during blackouts by 16 master switches rather than by the present 157 outside switches.

The delay in darkening the city by having patrolmen speed to attend these individual control boxes was highlighted in last week's spotty blackout, when whole sections were minutes in becoming dark. One section of Pennsylvania Avenue pointing directly to the White House remained lighted during the entire test period.

The new switches, for which the War Production Board granted priorities on April 8, will be located in six police precinct stations and 10 power substations. The Commissioners allocated $35,000 from the Blackout Funds to be paid the Potomac Electric Power Co. for the installation of the new controls and the removal of the 157 manually operated ones.

James H. Ferry, Pepco official, said that the work of substituting the new for the old controls is to begin at once. Just when it will be completed is another question, however, since the conditions that will be encountered when the cables are being run into the police and power stations are unpredictable.

C. Melvin Sharpe, chief of the Civilian Defense utilities service, said the Commissioners' order is the definite answer to the blackout problem.

Of the 34,178 street lights in the District, only 33,241 will be controlled from the 16 master switches The remaining 937 are shielded, orange lights indicating fire alarm boxes, and are not extinguished during blackouts.

Navy Announces 9 Additional Casualties

The Navy announced yesterday nine casualties, including one dead and 8 missing. In addition, five previously reported "missing" were announced as dead.

This brings to 24,914 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported to next of kin since December 7, 1941. The grand total includes 7182 dead, 4664 wounded and 13,067 missing.

District House Delegate Bill Introduced

A bill to give the District of Columbia a delegate in the House of Representatives was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Walter (Democrat) of Pennsylvania and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Walter said he had long been interested in the fact that a large group of citizens in the United States had long been without representation in their government.

"I am sure that if the District had had consistent representation in Congress the outrageous insanitary and overcrowded housing conditions and slums which we find in Washington would never have been permitted to develop.

Filthy Conditions

"I can't find words strong enough to condemn the filthy living conditions here. It looks as if the only thing we can do about them now is to pass the appropriation bill which will allow the Alley Dwelling Authority to go ahead with its slum clearance program."

Walter's bill, one of a long series of measures to secure representation for the District, provides for election of a delegate by all citizens of the District every 2 years. Term of office would coincide with those of members of the House.

Candidates would be nominated by a petition of 1000 qualified persons. Those qualified for voting would be United States citizens, who have been actual residents of the District for one year immediately preceding the election.

Other Requirements

At the same time of election a delegate must have been a citizen of the United States for seven years, and an actual resident of the District for five years before the election, without claiming any other residence during that period.

From 1871 until 1874 the District had a delegate in the House until Congress provided the District should be governed by three commissioners.

Walter said he had attended college and law school here and was a member of the Judiciary Committee to which his bill was referred.

Hilleboe Gets Tuberculosis National Post

Dr. H. E. Hilleboe, medical officer in charge of the tuberculosis control in the States relations division of USPHS, was elected a director-at-large of the National Tuberculosis Association at yesterday's meeting of the board in St. Louis, Mo. He will serve a two-year term, ending in 1945.

According to Dr. Hilleboe, who reached here last night, his election is probably less a personal recognition than a recognition of the close working relationship between N. T. A. and USPHS and an effort to even more closely knit that relationship. Dr. Hilleboe says that when a powerful volunteer body and a public office will cooperate, each can advise the other, and one can do services which the other is not able to perform.

Dr. Hilleboe, who lives at 701 Elm, Chevy Chase, Md., came here in January from St. Paul, Minn., where he was chief of the medical unit of the State division of social welfare and at the same time medical coordinator for the State social security department. He also was assistant clinical professor of preventive medicine and public health at the University of Minnesota Medical School from which he was graduated in 1929.

He first became interested in tuberculosis when several cases of tuberculous meningitis developed among children he was treating in Swanville, Minn., and helped promote a town campaign which led to the testing of the entire population of 500 in a six months period. Twenty-two cases were discovered.

In 1935 he received his M. A. in public health at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, and in 1939-42 he was on loan from the Minnesota surgeon general's office to the Governor to develop a medical care program and superintend the State's 15 tuberculosis sanitariums.
